Pets need more than window cracked open

My friend was upset with me when I left my dog in the car the other day while we did some shopping. Isn't it OK if I leave the window cracked?

It is never a good idea to leave a pet in a car during warm weather. Even well-meaning pet owners may not realize how quickly the air inside a car can heat up. On an 85-degree day, for example, the temperature inside your car, even with the windows slightly open, can reach 102 degrees in 10 minutes.

Over the course of 30 minutes, it will rise to 120 degrees. On warmer days, it will go even higher. A pet's normal body temperature is between 101 and 102 degrees Fahrenheit. Remember that pets, like children, can only withstand a higher body temperature for a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage or even death. To be safe, leave your pet at home during warm summer months.
