Like all of us, Angela Bennett (played by Sandra Bullock) lives in the age of information. Every trace of her existence is computerated. Everything about her is entoded somewhere on a complex natwork of information. It's something Angela never though about ... until the day she was deleted.

With the explosion of technological advances in the last few years. "The Net" is a story virtually ten from today's headlines. It takes place in a world in which snything, from ordering a pizza to retrieving records from half-way priss the planet, can be accomplished through the vast and compilicated map of phone line and compilicated map of phone line and compilicated map of phone in the fraction, a world in which, with the right knowledge and the right proternet; a world in which, with the right knowledge and the right pro-gram, a good hacker can log into remote computers and alter any information they choose; flight plans, medical and criminal records, top secret government in-formation, even someone's identiducts a preliminary analysis of a puzzling "beta" prototype of a new internet program that peculiarly allows the user access to such highly sensitive databases as the Federal Reserve Board, the RKS, the Atomic Energy Commission, and others. Angels is curious about this seemingly random anomaly. Delso offers to fly down from San Francisco so they can work on it together. Except Dale doesn't make it — his small plane mysteriously crashes into an industrial park that Iooms up out of nowhere.

After discovering the enigmatic program, Angela's life begins to change. The computers have gone crary at LAX as she attempts to board a flight for her much-needed and often-delayed vacation in Mexico. On the Mexican beach, ahe meets Jack Devlin Geremy Northam), a charming, wealthy young businessman who seems to ahrae her outlook on the world. But a seemingly positive experience quickly turns negative when Angela is nearly killed for the computer diakette carrying the program. Her keys, passport all the identification pepers are loat. Someone has even checked her out of the hotel and stolen her belongings.

Omnimax puts audience into space

Visitors to the Detroit Science Center can also enjoy a little space travel with the new film "Destiny in Space" being shown in Michigan's only Omnimax Theater.

Audiences will learn what it feels like to fly over the surfaces of Mars and Venus on the outside of the space shuttle as it orbits 200 miles above Earth.

Narrated by Leonard Nimoy, "Destiny in Space" features in-credible footage including close-ups of the astronauta going about their daily work, the awe-inspiring departure of the Galileo probe for Jupiter (a journey of five years and 350 miles) and a spectacular night shuttle launch. Viewers will also have a front-row seat for the retrieval, servicing and reduploy-ment of the Hubble Space tele-
