Strong finish boosts area pro

By STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Western Golf & Country Club (Redford Township) head professional Ily Bolo made a Jack Nicklaus-like charge in the last two holes to win his second straight Michigan PGA Seniors Tournament Championship last month at Silver Lake Country Club in Rockford.

Bolo, 62, saved par after a poor tee shot on the 17th hole and eagled the 18th hole to finish the 36-hole tournament with a 2-under-par 142 (70-72). Bolo, the 1994 Michigan Seniors Player of the Year, earned a first-place check of $2,400.

Bolo, who also won the Michigan PGA in 1988, was one shot better than Johnny Molenda, 58, the head pro at Knollwood Country Club in West Bloomfield.

The way Bolo overcame adversity must have reminded the gallery of some comebacks made famous by Nicklaus, one of golf's all-time greats.

Molenda sank a wedge shot to eagle the par-4, 375-yard 17th hole and take a two-shot lead on Bolo with one hole remaining. Bolo was fortunate to tie only two shots down, considering his tee shot on 17 ended up off the fairway next to a tree about 95 yards shy of the green. Rather than taking an extra stroke, the right-handed Bolo turned his 9-iron upside down and hit the ball left-handed.

His shot landed short of the green, but a chip got him close and the ensuing putt gave him par.

"God was with us on that (left-handed shot)," Bolo said.

Being two shots down with one hole to play, it appeared Bolo's best hope was to force a playoff hole.

For that, Bolo needed to eagle the par-5, 510-yard 18th hole and have Molenda settle for a par.

Bolo got his eagle, but Melinda lost a stroke after hitting a shot in the water to bogey 18 and lose the tournament by one stroke.

Bolo's tee shot, meanwhile, landed 270 yards straightaway down the fairway. Using a 3-iron, Bolo put his second shot three feet from the cup and he buried his putt for an eagle and the championship.

Bolo said he can adapt to hards because he plays all the time at Western, which he believes is one of the toughest private courses in the state.

"If you can play this course, you can play almost any," Bolo said. "It has small greens, is long enough, but tight enough off the tees."

Bolo didn't get to work much on his game over the winter because of a hernia and a pulled ligament in his leg.

After surgery and some rest, he returned to play but aggravated the leg injury on the second hole of the first day at the PGA Seniors Championship in April.

"I tried to hit a 2-iron hard, but when I hit against the left side, I pulled the ligament again," Bolo said.

Bolo got back into playing condition working out at American Rehabilitation in Livonia, which he credits for his quick return.

"I thought it would take me longer to be playing good," he said.

Bolo is now preparing for the National Club Pro Seniors Championship, which will be held Oct. 17-18 in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. He placed about 35th last year.

New semi-pro team has kickoff

By CHRIS MAYER
STAFF WRITER

It's 8:30 p.m. and the Oakland County Chargers are tucked away behind Pontiac Northern High School, alone in their own private football world.

A steady rain continues to fall, and daytime is quickly turning to night, but Coach Reggie Mathis and his assistants are intent on running a productive practice with the team's Midwest Football League season opener just three days away.

There are no crowds lining the practice field for this semiprofessional team, like the ones drawn every summer by another gridiron squad that calls the city of Pontiac home. But the Chargers' coaches and players supply plenty of enthusiasm.

"We've got them all. We have players from all walks of life," said Darrell Henry, the Chargers' president and director of football operations. "A lot of guys are here to prove something to that old high school coach who kind of stuck them on a shelf somewhere. Or to that college coach who cut them and wouldn't take a look at them. A lot of these guys have a lot to prove, personally, and with regards to football. There are a lot of different angles why these guys come out here and play."

Semipro football has arrived in Oakland County.

The Chargers, a Southfield-based, nonprofit organization dedicated to not only providing an outlet for adults with the desire to play full-contact football but helping them enhance education and employment prospects, suited up Aug. 5 at Pontiac's Wiener Stadium.

The team, developed out of a partnership between Henry, 30, and Mathis, 39, has practiced for its first game, but the visiting Gary (Ind.) Golden Bears were still no match. Final score: Chargers 40, Gary 0.

"It was a good first game, but we have some things to work on," Mathis said. "Once people in Oakland County know what we're about and see what kind of organization we have, there's no doubt in my mind we'll have a great following."

Mathis, a former linebacker with the NFL's New Orleans Saints (1979-82) and previous member of the Arena Football League's Detroit Drive (1988-92), and Henry, a semipro football veteran and Detroit native, were looking to start semipro teams of their own last year and crossed paths.

Tryouts were conducted in April and the response was encouraging. It didn't matter that the players must outfit themselves at their own expense (upwards of $500) and pay a player fee.

"Because this is our first year, the players are paying for their own uniforms," Henry said. "Our uniforms are authentic NFL uniforms, just like the (San Diego) Chargers."

The youngest player is 17; the oldest 35. Some played college football, some didn't attend college. But they all share something in common.

"The first is the love of the game and the second is the hope of trying to advance a football career," Henry said.

Area players include Vinson (Troy), Pete Long and Michael Demaggio of Bloomfield Hills and David Vinson (Lake Orion).

No one connected with the Chargers receives a salary for his or her services. All funds collected by the team go toward team operations, including home field rental, officials' fees and equipment. Donations are suggested as ticket prices.

"We ask for a $5 donation for adults. Seniors 65 and older and children under 12 are free," Henry said. "We want to get people to come out and see us because once they see us, they'll want to come back."

RAISING SOME EYEBROWS

Upper eyelid surgery may make eyes look larger and brighter by removing fat and excess tissues from the upper lid. But it will do nothing to lift the eyebrows. This truth holds despite the fact that relaxation of the skin and muscles of the eyebrows and forehead may well contribute to excessive upper eyelid sag. If so, the procedure known as a brow lift may be undertaken to raise the eyebrows and upper orbit, as well as to smooth out forehead lines and flatten deep frown lines between the eyes. In some cases, the brow lift may be undertaken as a substitute for upper eyelid surgery. Either procedure alone or done in conjunction with the other is sure to give the face a more rested and youthful appearance.

Persons interested in upper eyelid surgery should consider careful evaluation of their specific condition and needs by a surgeon who is certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery. Members of this board are dedicated to the highest standards of patient care and continue development of professional skill and competence in competent hands, eye surgery results in minimal discomfort and the recovery is relatively rapid, with planning.

More about eyelid surgery, call SOUTHWESTERN PLASTIC SURGERY at (313) 531-0700 or 1-800-876-8264, or see us at 704 MARS STREET, Suite 108, west end one hour from Metro Detroit.

Up to 40% Savings on U.S. dollars

P.S. The cost of a brow lift is hidden below the surface.
