

Special pictures deserve custom treatment

For example, does your picture need cropping? Are there some highlights that are washed out or some shadow areas where detail has been lost? Are there some spots or scratches on the original negative that are showing up in the print? Or perhaps certain areas of your picture need lightening or darkening. Well, a custom lab

What's the best way to find a custom lab in your area? Word of mouth is always ideal. Ask a photographer friend or a professional photographer for a rec-

Beneath veneers of laminate, vinyl film, and wood, substrate materials form the base of cabinet sides, tops, bottoms, doors, and drawers. Particleboard is a substrate product that is formed by mixing wood particles with resin and bonding them under pressure. Higher quality particleboard is rated as a Class I pressure applied grade. This rating refers to the amount of pressure applied during the bonding process. Particleboard of sufficient thickness and strength assures that it will not suffer other fastening devices will be properly aligned. Also, cabinets will not buckle or warp. Medium-density fiberboard, too, is a high-quality substrate material made of finer fibers than particleboard. It offers superior strength, resists water damage, and has smooth surfaces.
