

Citizens committee works for public safety millage

A citizens committee was out in force during the weekend of Oct. 14-15 and expects to be out again to push for passage of the Farmington Hills Public Safety tax.

The 1-mill proposal will go to voters Nov. 7.

The Committee for a Safer Farmington Hills delivered literature on the proposal that would add more firefighters and police officers and cut down on response times.

Lt. Tom Shurtliff, a firefighter and committee member, said the committee will be out at least two more weekends before the vote.

Farmington Hills spends $13.8 million a year on public safety compared to $23.8 million in Southfield and $21.4 million in Livonia. Medical emergency runs exceed 4,500 a year, an increase of 78 percent since 1994.

Hills police are well below the national average of officers per residents.

Both the police officers' union local and the command officers' union have endorsed the proposal. All five city council candidates and mayoral candidate Aldo Vagnoni favor the proposal. Mayoral candidate Paul Sowerby said he neither favors nor opposes the tax.

Milling about: Corey Bartsch, far left, and Ben Vaughan, far right, of the Citizens for a Safer Farmington Hills were among the many who distributed fact sheets and lawn signs promoting the Nov. 7 Public Safety millage. The Doughty family of Clark, Claudia, Chris and Brian, put one of the signs in their Kendallwood subdivision yard. They were among the 3,000 registered voters and their families contacted during the Oct. 14-15 door-to-door campaign by committee workers.
