

Needy families bank on group's food collection efforts

BY LAURIE HUMPHREY

What are you having for dinner tonight? Next week? Next year?

Even people who flippantly respond "I'm not sure, I haven't thought that far ahead" can be pretty sure they'll eat something.

That is not the case for more than 50,000 people in Oakland County.

"We help keep their lives going," said Jim Macy, executive director of the Oakland County Food Bank in Pontiac. "Most of the people in Oakland County who get help are working and just not making enough to meet their necessities."

The county food bank, serving Southfield, Clarkston, Farmington Hills, Oxford/Lake Orion, Rochester Hills, Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham and other Oakland communities, distributes literally tons of food to 100 community groups every couple weeks. The groups then give food to individuals.

als in their community. Between 70,000 and 80,000 people are assisted every month.

This method of distribution is preferred over others, explained the 10-year executive director and Oakland County resident.

"If we tried to give food to individuals out of this building, there would be a line all the way around," he said, speaking of the food bank's building that sits a well-traveled street. "That's pretty demoralizing."

"The way we do it, volunteers are able to meet with the people, able to share their stories and provide referrals to help get them through."

This system also helps keep the public from being harassed by volunteers looking for donations.

"So instead of having 100 voices asking for help, you have one voice and the food gets distributed proportionately to the need."

But the purpose of the food bank is not just supplying food for the hungry, it's providing emotional and psychological support.

"We're building bridges between parts of the community that are being torn apart and divided," Macy said. "What we're saying is, 'You count. You're important and the community values you.'"

Helping to preserve the health of people in need has been the motto of food banks since the first began in 1917.

John Van Hengel, who was sent to Phoenix from Minneapolis to recover from an illness, volunteered to help at St. Mary's Soup Kitchen in Phoenix. He collected the assistance of farmers and, later, food processors to secure and store food for people in need. The donations were overwhelming and he invited other emergency food providers to come and get food to provide to their communities.

"Word got out about this and food banks sprang up all over the country," said Macy. "Today, there are 185 food banks in the country serving 50,000 pantries, shelters and soup kitchens."

Food donations to the Oakland County Food Bank come from corporations, food drives and money contributions. Individuals looking to contribute a bag of groceries are never turned away, however. They are directed to the nearest community group distributor like the Salvation Army.

"A place like the Salvation Army in Pontiac will serve 1800 people this month," said Macy. "(And) just about every community in Oakland County has a place (like this) that is distributing food."

The reason many corporate donors, like General Mills and Kellogg's, volunteer their food is twofold. First, they support the work of the Oakland County Food Bank. Second, they do not have to pay for dumping their food surplus.

Before 1967, when corporate food processors had a surplus of food, they paid to have it transported to a landfill and dumped. Van Hengel prompted corporate food processors to save their money by calling food bank officials and allow them to make transportation accommodations to deliver to the food bank.

"We got a trailer load worth $50,000 of cereal Friday, and it cost us $350 to transport it from Battle Creek to Pontiac. So it cost us about a penny a box for cereal from Kellogg's," he said. That compares to grocery store prices of $3 to $5 a box.

Cereal is not the only food item stored at the food bank. The organization also collects vegetables, fruits, meats and items to fulfill all the basic food groups. Items are stored in a 20,000-square-foot facility.

Hattie Manley, the food program coordinator for St. Stephen's Baptist Church in Farmington Hills, is one of the many people who come to the food bank to pick up food for distribution.

"I come here once a week and take the food back to the church and stock our shelves. Two times a month, we pack up boxes and give them to people," said the six-year volunteer. She along with the other volunteers are careful to include as many of the necessities as they can.

"But we don't get meat very often," she said.

And the food bank almost never gets eggs or milk, so families are given coupons redeemable at the store for free eggs and milk.

According to Manley, seeing the "smiles on the faces" after she gives the families their food is enough to keep her committed.

Macy agreed that there are a lot of needs and commended a particular group of people who are working to address those needs.

"The religious community are particularly sensitive to the needs of the community," he said, noting that most of the 100 local distribution centers are churches.

Macy expects to collect 3 1/2 million pounds of food this year, up from 2 1/2 million pounds from 1993.

"The food that we give out this year... You could fill the Palace of Auburn Hills 175 times and we could provide food for all of them," he said.

It is that sense of giving, coupled with the "wonderful people" that brings the former Catholic priest to work every morning.

"I'm positioned in the middle of two groups of giving people — the donating corporations and the volunteers who give food to the people."

"We all try to help in whatever way we can."

Local centers accessible for food drop-off

Although the Oakland County Food Bank works to distribute food to citizens in need all year round, the holiday season is particularly important. Fortunately, that is also when people are most giving, said Jim Macy, executive director of the Oakland County

Food Bank.

"That's certainly when the general interest is at its highest level."

Anyone interested in making someone's holiday season a little brighter is encouraged to drop off food items at local community distribution centers such as: Farmington Hills Baptist, Farmington Hills; Five Points Community, Auburn Hills; Lakes of Charity, Bloomfield Hills; Light-house North, Clarkston; Oxford; Orion Fish, Lake Orion; Oxford;

Rochester Church of the Nazarene, Rochester Hills; St. Alexander, Farmington; Salvation Army, Farmington; Southfield Human Resources, Southfield; Temple Beth El, Birmingham; Walled Lake; Walled Lake; and Yadda, Southfield.
