Happiness During Holiday Time Comes From Within

The holiday season is upon us, and it's time to get out the ornaments, lights, candles or whatever. It's also time to review your attitude and your supply of patience towards other people, as well as the status of your relationships with friends and relatives.

If you have had a misunderstanding with someone close to you, now is the time to apologize, even if you're sure that you were not at fault. Do whatever you can to make amends, and you will be happier for it. Also, try to be more polite towards strangers, and remember to put the needy on your gift list. Lastly, take the time to attend your House of Worship.

If you do all of these things, your home will be brighter than all the lights in the world could ever make it.

An ounce of apology is worth a pound of love.
— Joseph Joubert
