Farmington seeks election workers

The city of Farmington is looking for a few good . . . election workers.

They'll be needed to handle precincts for the upcoming Presidential primary, and August and November elections. Elections inspectors put in a full day, checking voter registrations, helping at voter machines and filling out statement sheets. Inspectors are paid for the 12- to 14-hour work day.

"I'm looking for quite a few applicants because many of our workers are retiring," said Janice Schmidt, who works in the clerk's office.

Elections inspectors have to be registered voters in the city. Application forms are available at Farmington City Hall. For information, call 474-5500.
