White House invites Hills business owner

Public relations consultant Sandra M. Hermanoff, president of Hermanoff & Associates in Farmington Hills, was among 15 people invited to discuss social and business issues Feb. 20 at the White House.

Attendees from all over the United States spent 90 minutes sharing concerns with President Bill Clinton.

"One point touched on was small business," Hermanoff said. "The strength that small business owners have when we work together is extremely powerful."

Whether it's through organizations such as SBA or a specific issue that affects us all, we have to realize that entrepreneurs do have a tremendous resource in one another.

"The President is an articulate, compassionate and intelligent man who knows details about issues most people don't think he's familiar with. He's a great listener, and that's why he relates to people so well. He really cares."

Founded in 1985, Hermanoff & Associates has offices in Farmington Hills and Detroit.
