

"Serving the Consumer Applies to Higher Education Too"

Not everyone follows the same path to a college degree. Some students go straight to college from high school and graduate in four years. Others take a different route. They attend college for only a few semesters. They join the work force or the armed services, learn a trade, start a family. Eventually, finishing a degree means fitting college study in among the demands of a job, a home, children and volunteer commitments. Close to half of all undergraduates in the United States are over the age of twenty-four.

Emerging needs in daily living have demanded new vision. Professionally, the work force of tomorrow will be required to be technically versed as well as sound communicators, problem-solvers and critical thinkers. Educational institutions face the dual challenge of preparing students to be multi-dimensional and to offer programming that meets their lifestyle needs.

Sienna Heights College Metropolitan Detroit Program has been responding to the special needs of the working-adult student for over twenty years. Over 350,000 adults in the tri-county area have between one-to-three years of college but do not have their bachelor's degree. Sienna Heights College offers a flexible, convenient way for adults like these to complete their college degrees. Here's How: Classes are offered in eight-week terms continuously throughout the year. That means a student can take classes in September-October, then stop out for November-December if that is a busy time for them. If a person is on a fast track to finish a degree they can enroll for all six terms and study throughout the year. Classes are scheduled mornings, evenings and weekends. The Metropolitan Detroit office is open seven days a week, with academic advisors available days, evenings and some weekends to meet the scheduling needs of the working student.

Finally, Sienna Heights College is committed to working on an individual basis with each student, taking into account all prior college and work/life experience to maximize transfer credit potential. The typical adult student has already achieved a lot - on the job, in school, in community work or in the military; the Metropolitan Detroit Program lets each individual build on that foundation.

Dr. Patricia McDonald, Assistant Dean of Student and Academic Support Services also teaches both undergraduate and graduate courses for the metro Detroit program.

Stop Muscle Pain in its Tracks the natural way

"The water from Mt. Clemens has been a life saver for me on numerous occasions and I am leaving for my home in Tulsa (Oklahoma) this time with renewed confidence (in the Mt. Clemens waters) as a haven for broken down newspaper men and especially men who have reached advanced age," wrote W.H. Peck, oil editor for Tulsa Daily World in November 1920.

Seventy-three years later, Paula Littwin from Bradenton, Florida wrote, "your sample offer has brought me a product that actually works to alleviate pain and I've already recommended it to others who are suffering from muscle and legitimate aches of any type including arthritis."

Both Peck and Littwin are talking about the same thing. Peck referred to the relief he found from the minerals in the once-famous baths in Mount Clemens. Littwin also got her relief from these bath waters, but this time in the product, Ache-Away. Ache-Away captures the natural healing powers of the mineral water that attracted people from all over the world to Mount Clemens until the year of and following the Depression.

The waters were almost forgotten until Ache-Away president, Max Simon traveled to the Macomb County area to seek relief from a shoulder injury. He rediscovered the healing powers of the mineral waters in the late 1980s. Since then, Simon left his former job in the carpet business, and developed one of the Mount Clemens artesian wells and targeted several FDA approved pain relief, skin and equine (horse) products, for sale to the public.

These products contain the 30 minerals extracted from the water. They include calcium chloride, sodium chloride, magnesium chloride, potassium chloride, calcium sulfate, magnesium bromide, hydrogen sulfide, carbonic acid, calcium hypochlorite, sodium sulfate and lithium.

For those who want to try natural pain relief with Ache-Away or Simon's skin-care products called Natural Mineral Mugik, they are sold at Meijer's, Arbor Drugs, Nutri-Foods and soon to be available at Rite-Aid Drug Stores. The office for Mount Clemens Mineral Products is at 10824 West Nine Mile Road in Oak Park. The phone number is 1-800-820-0220.
