

Leo's Souvlaki Coney Island specializes in 'good food'

Ask Leo Stassinopoulos why people should frequent any one of his seven restaurants, and he'll tell you. "We serve good food."

The former resident of Greece came to the U.S. in 1972 to make money. He's found a way to do that - with clean restaurants specializing in efficient service and delicious food for almost everyone's taste.

Whether that taste ranges from American breakfasts to hot and spicy to traditional Greek fare, Leo's Souvlaki Coney Island has it. His restaurants are located in Southfield, Farmington Hills (2), Troy, Livonia, Farmington and Bloomfield Township.

His seventh restaurant recently opened at 164 South Woodward in Birmingham. Like the others, it offers carry out service as well as catering for parties, meetings and the like.

"We're open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays and from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays," Stassinopoulos said.

He'd like people to come in and try his new restaurant in Birmingham. Its menu features unusual items, such as a spinach and feta cheese omelette among its many choices. His famous Greek salad is available in three different sizes. In addition to the traditional lemon rice soup, diners can always choose between bean or chicken noodle soup. The menu also offers full dinners or just nibbles of many varieties.

When you visit Leo's Souvlaki Coney Island in Birmingham, ask if Leo is there and say hello. He'd like to know what you think of his newest - but not his last - restaurant.
