RIKI SCHAFFER GALLERY
Through March 27 — "Fragments of Memories," an exhibit by doll artist David Robertson, continues at 7 N. Saginaw, Pontiac. The display features Robertson's figurative sculpture depicting the wrath of the Holocaust. Among the details, children carry photos of loved ones in antique picture frames, and the figures wear clothing made by Robertson out of antique material. Call (810) 745-9494.

CENTER GALLERIES
Through March 29 — "Transformations," featuring a group of paintings by Aris Koutroullis and Jim Lutes that combine and merge abstract and figurative elements, continues at the Park Shelton Building, 16 E. Kirby, Detroit. Koutroullis chairs the Center for Creative Studies fine arts department. Formerly primarily an abstract painter, he now combines the silhouetted human figure with abstract backgrounds. Lutes is professor of painting at Illinois State University. Once predominantly a figurative painter, he now interweaves abstract lines and curves with recognizable objects and forms. Call (313) 874-1955.

CARY GALLERY
Through March 30 — Still life works by Ann Loveland, one of Michigan's premier watercolorists, are exhibited at 226 Walnut Blvd., Rochester. CREATIVE ARTS CENTER
Through March 30 — In honor of Black History Month, the center at 47 Williams, Pontiac, features the work of an array of distinguished African-American artists. For "Great Lakes Blues/The Container," Michigan minority artists produced two- and three-dimensional objects based on themes reflecting personal and cultural histories in the Great Lakes region. "The Ties That Bind" is a multimedia show illustrating the impact of ancestral histories on the creative impulses of artists. Call (810) 333-7849.

THE ART GALLERY II
During March — Featured artists of the month in the local artists cooperative at Summit Mall in Waterford are Delores Hawkins, Nancy Wurn, Ray Hawkins and Jack Martin. Hawkins' vibrant use of watercolor brings her beautiful still life, florals and animals to life. Her work includes a variety of Indian ink drawings as well as Sumi paintings. Wurn is a real-estate painter who uses inks, watercolor and oils to create her visions of still life and animals. Ink and oil portraits from models or photographs, and tiny animal sculptures, are specialties of hers. Hawkins uses handcrafted reformed paper to design his unusual style of vases, lamps, plates and more. His painting and texturing add to their beauty. Martin, a master of pen and ink drawings, has originals of barns, lighthouses, trains and boats, and handcolored prints. Call (810) 683-8142.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL OF DETROIT
