and a strong family life." Neighbors, family, friends and fellow parishioners from St. Aidan's Church have been very helpful, particularly early on. Mercer also belong to the Tri County Mothers of Multiples, whose members brought over meals in the beginning.

"I'd like to thank everyone," she said. "People really are good and willing to help. Even companies have been nice. Toys R Us gave us $150, all the contractors for our addition gave us a break. Usually when people hear of our situation, they have compassion."

Rainbow Recreation of Novi is giving them a discount on a backyard playset. Through the Parishian for multiples program, Mercer has been able to buy $350 worth of clothing, and get an equal amount free. She admits Courtney gets the lion's share of new clothes. The baby boys wear a lot of hand-me-downs from the twins. Entertainment now is renting movies from the video store or recording the antics of their brood on a recently purchased camcorder.

The twins and triplets are fraternal, so telling them apart has never been a problem. All the births were natural delivery, the twins at Beaumont Hospital and the triplets at Providence Hospital. The triplets all came home with their mom two days after their June 19 birth.

Some favor their mom's dark hair and brown eyes, others look more like their blond, blue-eyed dad. Their personalities are unique.

"Nathan is very mild, kind, well-mannered and easygoing," said his mom. "Ryan is jolly and happy-go-lucky. Courtney is a fireball. She's feisty. She screams when she wants something."

So how does mom plan to pull off peaceful Mother's Day? By leaving town, of course.

"My husband and I are taking the twins to Disney World for four days," she said. "The boys have been so good."
