Many seeking judgeships

BY PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITER

A joke judges sometimes tell in private goes something like this: What's the quickest way to get people on the moon? Answer: establish a judgeship without an incumbent.

Incumbent Judge Robert L. Templin guaranteed a hotly contested judicial race this year—in Oakland County, not the moon—because he was unable to seek re-election, according to state law, after passing the age of 70.

Four candidates are running to fill that vacancy. They are Carol Hackett Garagiola of Bloomfield Hills, Nanci Grant of West Bloomfield, Susan Moiseev of Southfield and John N. O'Brien of Royal Oak.

In five other elections for Oakland Circuit Court judge, a total of six candidates are running. They are incumbents Steven Andrews of Bloomfield Hills, Barry Howard of West Bloomfield, Fred Mester of Bloomfield Hills, Rudy Nichols of Clarkston and Gene Schnelz of Walled Lake.

The only non-incumbent is Leslie Ann Logan of Bloomfield Hills.

In the 2nd District Court of Appeals race, incumbents Mark Cavanaugh of Royal Oak, E. Thomas Fitzgerald of Owosso, Henry William Sand of Birmingham and challenger Mary Chranowski of Clinton Township are running.

With one exception, candidates in area congressional races have little opposition, at least when it comes to the Aug. 6 primary.

Democratic and Republican hopefuls in the 9th and 11th Districts—northern and southwestern Oakland County, respectively—are unopposed.

Only in the 12th District—Troy and southeastern Oakland County—is there a contested primary election. That's on the Republican ticket were John Papageorge of Troy and Kevin Wright of Madison Heights are both seeking the GOP nomination.

The winner will run against incumbent Democrat Sander Levin in the Nov. 6 general election.

In the 9th, Patrick M. Nowak-R of Clarkston will run against incumbent Dale Kildee-D of Flint.

The 9th District includes Auburn Hills, Clarkston, Pontiac and 10 townships including Orion, Independence and Oakland.

In the 11th District—west of Birmingham and south of West Bloomfield—Morris Prum-D of Bingham Farms will run against incumbent Joe Knollenberg-R of Bloom-
