the political action committee of the Michigan Trial Lawyers association. The group contributed $5,000.

"I'm for the free market," Raczowski said in explaining the contribution from the group usually considered "liberal" and opposed to tort reform. "I'm not for tort reform, but court reform," he said. Raczowski said he favors an alternative dispute resolution system already adopted in Colorado and Wisconsin, but believes the free market, and person's right to pursue damages should not be curtailed.

Other contributors included the Oakland County Political Action Committee for $250, former state Sen. David Honigman for $500, GOP candidate for Oakland County prosecutor David Gorey for $50, the Michigan State Firefighters Union PAC for $250, Michigan Citizens Voice for $250, Michigan Conservative Union for $100, former Hills mayoral candidate Paul Sowerby for $100, David Brandon of Plymouth ($250), Craig DeRoche of Novi for $250, John and Carol Apol of Farmington Hills ($200) and Irene and Jerzy Przyluski of Chicago ($200).

Webb's biggest contributor was the Michigan Education Association's PAC, which gave $4,000 to her campaign after the filing deadline.

"All four candidates answered questionnaires and three of them (not including Jolicoeur) interviewed," said the Farmington schools trustee. "I'm happy for the support but a little surprised. I have not always agreed with their positions, but I think they know that I've supported and promoted public education in Michigan."

Other contributors included the PAC for school superintendents for $500, also after the filing deadline. Planned Parenthood ($200), the Michigan School Administrators PAC ($500), Agripac, the Michigan Farm Bureau's PAC, and M-PACE, the PAC for the National Association of Social Workers for $300.

Botsford General Hospital CEO Gerson Cooper

($400), Hills City Councilman Jon Grant ($250), Hills Commission on Children, Youth and Family Chairman Dick Daguanne ($145), Hills EDC Chairman John Anhalt ($200), Hills Parks and Recreation Chairman Jerry Ellis ($125) and Farmington City Councilwoman Mary Bush ($35) were some of Webb's contributors.

Jolicoeur received PAC contributions from the National Federation of Independent Businesses ($500), Investment Dwight Labadie and his wife of Grosse Pointe Woods ($800), Robin Rissner, owner of Picometrix of Ann Arbor ($500), the Small Business Association ($1,000), the Retail PAC ($200), Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce PAC ($1,000), Chrysler PAC ($200), Michigan Racing Association ($300), MAD-PAC ($200), ACG-PAC ($500), Alice Gustafson of Auburn Hills ($500), Richard Zech of Colorado Springs, Colo. ($500), Tarik Daoud of Beverly Hills ($500), Nickie and Dave Bradley of Howell, the Michigan Chamber of Commerce PAC ($500) and the Oakland County

Chamber of Commerce PAC ($500).

Jolicoeur and her husband contributed more than $5,000 to the campaign.

Sever received $200 from Ed Cleland, $100 from Foxpolute Apartments Limited Partnership in Southfield, $25 from Hills Councilwoman Maske Kuratja, $100 from Covington Club Apartments Limited Partnership in Southfield and loaned his campaign $400.

Dibert was his campaign's biggest contributor ($2,500). The 11th District Democratic Committee gave $1,000, Brickner for State Senate gave ($500), Planned Parenthood gave $50, state Sen. Gary Peters gave $75, Hills Mayor Aldo Vagnozzi gave $85 and Attorney Michael Spiece, who also contributed to Webb's campaign, gave $35.

Christoph's largest contributor was his wife Rose, a teacher with the Farmington schools who gave $3,000. The Michigan Dietetic Association PAC gave $200. The rest were individual contributions not exceeding $150.

She's happy about it: Retiring Farmington Hills police Sgt. John Hedrick is on the receiving end of a kiss from his wife Debra after ceremonies honoring him and Sgt. John Kohls July 19. Hedrick and Kohls had a combined 53 years of service in Farmington Hills. Hedrick joined the Hills department after serving in Pontiac. Kohls had been a Detroit officer with the same hire date as Chief Bill Dwyer before coming to Farmington Hills.

2 Hills police veterans sign out after 53 years combined service

Two veteran Farmington Hills police officers with more than a half century of service were honored July 19.

Sgt. John Hedrick, with 28 years on the Hills force, and Sgt. John Kohls, with 25 years, are retiring.

"I think I'll miss all the good people I've worked with," said Hedrick, the VFW's 1983 Police Officer of the Year.

Police Chief Bill Dwyer credited Hedrick for pioneering the department's undercover unit. Lt. Chuck Nebus, who worked under Hedrick at the time, said his former boss often took the lead, disarming criminals and leading by example.

"He always took care of us," Nebus said.

Kohls, who began his police career in Detroit along with Chief Dwyer, said he had seen dramatic technological changes in the department in a quarter of a century.

"That has been the biggest change," he said.

Lt. Ray Cranston said Kohls was instrumental in training him early on in his career in Farmington Hills.

Hedrick, who has a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University along with several citations and honors, served as a patrol officer, undercover officer and in crime prevention.

He said he'll enjoy time on the lake at his White Lake home along with his wife Debra. He is a father of five.

Kohls, a father of four, served in the patrol, detective bureau and in support services. He said he will spend more time with his wife Marilyn and his grandchilddren. He also plans on volunteering more time for his church activities.

Several family members, officers and city officials attended ceremonies honoring the two men. They received retirement badges and gifts along with some warm goodbyes.

"I think this is an example of why the voters supported the public safety millage," said Mayor Aldo Vagnozzi in complementing the officers.

"These guys were always good for a laugh and created the kind of atmosphere that you wanted to work in," said Inspector Dick Murphy.

Inspector Marty Bledsoe said the two taught him a valuable lesson early.

"They have a sense of humor," he said. "That is one of the best senses a police officer could have."
