Mary Case

anesthesia services at WSU, said Case's request to embark on a project overseas is a first during the 30 years the program has been offered at the university.

Case organized course content and prepared necessary teaching materials prior to departing for Guyana.

"Nursing as a career is the same as here, it attracts mostly women but a few men.

"The entire experience was very enriching. The students' receptiveness made me feel that I had an impact on their future."

Case stayed on the grounds of St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Georgetown.

"I hope to do this again sometime, maybe in Africa in the future," she said. "I'd rather go teach the skills to the people in the country than go there and perform skills. At least you leave them with something."

"Going to Guyana was extremely enlightening for me. It made me realize how very blessed we are here in this country."

NURSE TEACHER: Mary Case teaches one of her 13 students how to give a spinal anesthesia to a patient in Guyana. She went to the South American country to complete a master of science degree in nurse anesthesia.

work at Detroit Receiving, heart specialty at Harper, pediatric at Children's, and obstetrics at Hutzel.

"I always wanted to do something as a nurse volunteer in another country," she said. "Volunteering is rewarding, enriching and a wonderful way to impact the lives of an entire nation."
