DB-5, the gadget -leaded spy car that starred in 1964's film phenemenon "Goldfinger in "will be on display at Henry Ford Museum Jan. 11 through March 9, 1997.
Sometimes described as the car that made James Bond famous, the DBG appeared in "Goldfinger for only 19 minutes lending with bond wrecking the car) but still captured the imagination of audiences wordlevide. It proved no popular that it was resurrected for the next Bond film. 1965's "Thunderball."
This particular DBB—the DP/216/1 — is far more than Bond's clever, quick wit and amazing, unorthodox ways of achieving goals.

Braden points out that the high-tech nature of the DB5 was extraordinary for its time, and is even amazing today. The current DB6 is a restored version, with all the 'bells and whistles' of the original car in place but not necessarily in working order.
