Still Searching For A Cure For Dryness?

BY LING ANN CHOMN
STATF WHITE:

Whether you have a cruise planned or are simply staying put this winter, it's time to start thinking about swim wear.

According to Rachelle Fanelli, owner of Sunny 12 Lingerie and Leisure Wear in Plymouth, December, January and February are het months for swim suit sales because the selection is best. This year manufacturers continue to fine tune designs in realization more of us are working out, but we still need a little help when it comes to fighting gravity and eliminating unwanted bulges.

The buzz word this season is control'so fabrics have a higher percentage of lyera to camoundage, emphasize or provide a shapely lift. Still finding the right's uits never easy.

The hardest decision a lady sgoing to make is buying a bathing suit because it reveals so much of the body," said Fanelli. Most of our customers get to know us because of the bra-fitting service we offer. As professional bra fitters, we work with our clients' figures to find the perfect swimsuit. It makes it casior for them because they're not going in and out of the dressing room trying on dozens of suits."

Flattering fits

Fanelli begins a swim suit fitting by asking what asset a customer least likes.

"A lot of women think they need a suit with a skirt but that emphasizes the problem. Another big misconception is clothing size correlates with awimsuit size. We take a measurement to find the correct bra size and go from there," she said.

At Sunny Js, bra cups in swim wear begin at A and go all the ways to G. Over her last 11 years in business, Fanelli has found 70 percent of her first time bra fittings are wearing the wrong size. In a swim suit, this error causes shoulder straps to elip and the suit to ride up.

"About six to eight years ago, designers and manufacturers started realizing people are getting more body conscious. There are two ways people can accomplish control: a full girdle by Carol Wior takes away the tummy with power netting, or with a suit by cutting edge designer Anna Kloin, who's come out with a high-cut neck."

Carol Wior believes so strongly in the one-piece patented collection around the country using a before and after model to show the slimming difference. fabrics help sculpt the body poured into classic tanks, square necks, alluring high necks, and sculpture tank maillot. A basic black maillot with a higher neckine (586) provides large busted women more coverage.

"Anne Klein was the trend setter this year. She's gone to sable, olive and black and lowered the leg an inch. Now that the leg has been lowered, it's not put your navel anymore," said Fancili.

But in general, the trend is to a two-piece suit, bathing separates. Another trend is that people are getting larger on top. While some of this is attributed to implants, teenagers 12 to 18 have gotten much larger in thelast 10 years.

Exclent Designs by Patricia Karalla, based in Warren, has everything from thongs to full coverage tops and bottoms (about $46 each) "for the lady who thought she couldn't war a two piece."

Beach Bound Ltd. in Birmingham takes a slightly different approach to finding the perfect suit. Owner Carol Bross, who in her 11 years of creating custom swim wear, has yet to see the body that fits perfectly into a production swimsuit.

"By appointment only, we show customers different styles to try on. Once they find what they like, we take measurements every inch down the body for one pieces and not as many for a two-piece. Then they choose their material, said Carol Bross.
