COURT OF CHANCERY.

The chancery court was originally designed to render justice complete by amending the errors and mitigating the rigor of the other courts that were bound to the more strictleter of the law. It gave relief to minors and women who otherwise might come short of their full rights, and looks after all frauds, deceits, breaches of trust and confi-dence for which there is no redress at common law. It was probably de-rived from the council of state, unrived from the council of state, un-der which it originally acted, and of which it finally became independent. The great difficulty with proceed-ings in chancery is the delay that at-tends them, justice of times coming too late in the day.

TRUTHS AND GARISH PAINTINGS

To know by rote is not perfect knowledge, but to keep what one hath committed to his memory's charge is commendable; what a man charge is commendable; what a man directly knoweth that he will dispose of, without turning still to his books, or looking to his pattern. A mere booking sufficiency is unplessant. All I arpect of it is an embellishing of my actions, and not a foundation of them, according to Plato's mind, who saith constancy, faith and sincertix are true philosophy; as for cerity are true philosophy; as for other sciences, and tending else-where, they are but garish paintings. —Montaigne.

CAUSE OF DESERTS.

There is a popular idea that deserts like the Sahara are the bottoms of ancient iseas which have been lifted above their original elevation by geological forces. This notion is an erroneous one. Authorities contend that the sends of all the great deserts have been formed on the spot by the disintegration of the solid rocks on which they rest. All deserts are situated where the winds from the ocean, before reaching them, are exhausted of their moisture by beasing over mountains or ture by passing over mountains or agrees extensive tracts of land.
