to put the baby in. It's a myth that you can't touch the baby bird or any other baby with your hands. It's rewarding to watch the parents come and take care of their baby. If you find a feathered baby bird flapping his wings trying to fly, leave this baby alone. He is called a fledgling. He will be flying with his parents in about two days.

Baby bunnies: with their eyes open are not orphans. They can eat on their own. Baby bunnies cannot be made into pets; it is against the law to do so. Baby ducks are only orphans if you can't find the family. Do not place the duck in water. Keep the baby warm and feed uncooked small grained cereal. Use a shallow dish for water.

If you find a bably squirrel, raccoon or opeasum, do not pick it up. Let an adult handle the bably and keep it warm. Some baby animals will bite from fear.
