has a long and honor-filled history in music education. He is past president of the Michigan Unit of the American String Teachers Association. He was named Teacher of the Year' by both the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association and by the Michigan Unit of the American String Teachers Association. He holds two degrees in music from the University of Michigan and is a member of several honorary fraternities related to music and academic achievement.

Besides being the PSO conduc-Besides being the PSO conductor, he has also directed orchesters at the Interlochen Arts Camp, the Michigan State University Youth Music Program and Indiana University. Reed has also been involved with the Blue Lakes Fine Arts Camp and the New England Music Camp. He is an active adjudicator of bands and orchestras, frequently serving as a clinician and is highly sought after as a guest conductor.

Concortmaster Maria Smith's history with Reed goes back to her high school days in Okemos. Her first memories of Reed come from when Smith played at orchestra festivals and a music camp at Michigan State University that Reed attended in his role as music teacher. She will miss Reed, as will the rest of the orchectra, but understands his desire to have more time for personal pursuits such as traveling. Smith, a Southfield resident, is a musician by trade. Her days are filled with performing with her own group, the Cassini Ensemble, and with a number of area orchestras including the Michigan Opera Theatre, Smith also teaches violin privately. "Russ is nicer than some conductors and relates to the orchestra well," said Smith. The orchestra likes him and he likes the orchestra. He knows what he wants and tries very hard to get it."
