CALHOUN, AT THE OCULIST'S

La Follette's Story of the Darky Walk or Applied to Those Who Fear Reciprocity.

United States Senator La Follette, discussing reciprocity, said with a smile:
"These fears are groundless. They are groundless to the point of being ludicrous. They remind me, in fact, of Calhoun Clay."
"Calhoun Clay was a watter at a sea-side restaurant. The white glare of the sun-drenched beach injured his eyes, and he had to consult an oculist. The oculist fitted him out with spectacles, and, as he left the shop with the spectacles on his nose, he gave a great start and halted before a huge and extraordinary machine."
"Calhoun stared in awe at this machine for some time. Then he said: 'What's dat, boss?'"
"That," said the oculist solemnly, "is an ophthalmometer."
"Sho," muttered Calhoun, and he backed farther away, his eyes still fixed upon the formidable instrument—"sho," dat's what Ah wuz afeared it wuz."

WNY CELEBRITIES ARE FEW

Their Absence Permits the Imitation Swells to Shake Hands in a Safe Manner.

"Even if I didn't read the newspapers I would know that there are not many strange celebrities in town," said the young man with strong social instincts.
"I could tell by the way the imitation swells shake hands. Everybody shakes hands now in a safe and sane manner. Not for weeks have my fingers been twined in freakish fashion. That is because the shakers have met no one to set a bad example."

"Peccabilities is a handicraft are more contagious than fads in accent or clothes. Nearly every person of importance has his own way of grasping another's hand, and the small fry who ape their big brothers in everything else might as well copy their style in the busy social season when the big guns come and go pretty frequently the person of imitative habits will shake hands in a dozen different ways in as many weeks."

Coops in Fields for Babies.

That necessity is the mother of invention is shown by the hundreds of little buildings resembling chicken coops which are scattered over the fields of Weld county to provide daytime homes for the babies of the Russians who work in the fields.

The Russian mothers are obliged to take their babies to the fields and have built these little structures of wood, covering them with canvas. At noon and once in the morning and in the afternoon the mothers visit their children, leaving them alone for the remainder of the day.

The youngsters are apparently contented and remain in their little coops without a cry, gazing through the slats at the passersby—Greely Cor. Denver Republican.

For Extinguishing Oil.

For extinguishing oil fires where water is both ineffective and dangerous, frothy liquids have been recommended. In a late test near Hamburg a mixture of one quart each of caustic soda and alum solutions yielded 16 quarts of a yellowish-white foam, having a density of 0.14, and this could be sucked up and distributed like water by a hose. A basement of 20 square feet, filled with benzine to 20 inches, was fired, and was extinguished in 76 seconds with 18 gallons of the frothy mixture, and a burning benzene tank six feet in diameter and nine feet high, was extinguished in 13 seconds. The benzine was little affected, burning as usual after removal of the froth.

Old Maine House.

One of the oldest houses in Wintthrop is the old Maine stand on "Turkey lane." The name may not be familiar to present residents of the town, but Turkey lane was no dream to a past generation.

Its odd nomenclature is derived from the fact that prior to the war all the residents of the highway over the crest of the ridge owned and raised turkeys and over 100 gobblers each year gobbled their living here until a fatal Thanksgiving removed them from earth. The old Morton house stands just at the turn of the road and is about 130 years old—Lewiston Journal.

Amusing Typographical Errors.

A double-barreled typographical error is related in Henry S. Harrison's novel, "Queed." A southern paper referred to a spirited old major as "that immortal veterinary" and when it sought the next day to retrieve itself, at the major's insistent demand, the faithful words came out "immortal veteran." An equally amusing error was made on the occasion of a charity ball held in Buffalo. The society editor in describing the gowns of the women guests characterized one as having "iridescent trimmings." To her horror and surprise when she saw the article in print the dress was adorned with "indecent trimmings."

Another Discovery.

"Shakespeare was one of the ablest of brokers."
"How do you make that out?"
"By the number of stock quotations he furnished."

STAINED GLASS AND WOMEN

Later Sometimes Desert Churches Because Colors From Windows Put Streaks on Faces.

Churches whose treasures include costly stained glass windows find that their anxieties do not end with securing the money to pay for the window and the artist to execute the work.

"Every bit as important are the complexion of the women in nearby homes," said a minister. "I have known churches to lose valuable parishioners because the window at the back or side cast an unbecoming light on a lady's face. This would have happened in my church just a few days ago if I had not considered the lady's feelings and changed the design of the window, which was easier than changing the lady's pew or losing her support. The pew was a family inheritance, having been handed down by will from generation to generation; therefore it was out of the question to move. At the same time she had my sympathy in her revolt against that memorial window. No matter in what part of the pew she sat the glass cast a bright red spot right on the end of her nose and yellow streaks across her cheeks and forehead. Even a handsome woman would have been less attractive under that barbaric illumination; as my parishioner had not been particularly favored by nature those lighting faults were positively deforming. Fortunately it was not too late to change the lower half of the window, and the lady now sits bathed in a becoming violet glow."
