Orozovitz said. "He spent a lot of time here putting things in his mind he cleaned up after he was done and just really offered lots of hints about safety."

Another big plus of the safety service is the fact that having items installed didn't mar the appearance of Goretta's home and it won't be hard to change things back once her daughter, 10-month-old Kate, gets older.

"I've had him come back two or three times to add other things since that first time, because my daughter is crawling now and it's been really nice," she said. "He provides a real service and he was really reasonable with what he provided to me."

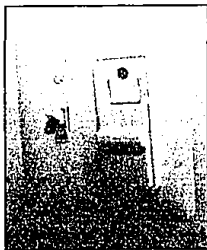

Noting that most clients have two-story homes and are interested in getting basic areas like stairways and outlets covered, Orozovitz said he doesn't offer package pricing because each client's home has its own needs.

A sample price quote would be $100 for the installation of a magnetic gate. That includes parts, labor and a one-year warranty. For those who prefer a safety evaluation first, Orozovitz charges $35 for the first hour at the client's home and $15 for each additional hour spent going over plans for safety.

If he is hired to put in the childproofing devices the cost for the evaluation can be deferred or worked into the overall cost at a lower rate, he said.

There is never a real shortage of interest in safety ideas and market whose historic average annual return is about 10 percent, these extraordinarily high returns obviously can't continue indefinitely. And investors should never buy a stock without researching it first.

If someone gives them a 'hot' stock tip, they should ask themselves, "If it's such a great tip, why is someone passing it on to me?"

People also need to be wary of stocks touted on the Internet. Although it's a great tool for investors, it's also a great tool for scam artists.

They use anonymous Internet messages on bulletin boards and in chat rooms to tout small, thinly-traded stocks. The rule of thumb is "If something sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

Technical Training Inc. named top Private 100

Technical Training, Inc. of Rochester Hills announced that it is once again recognized in the Michigan Private 100.

The Michigan Private 100 is an annual survey sponsored by The Detroit News, WWJ Radio and the public relations firm of Durocher, Dixon, Werba. It provides a snapshot into the tumultuous world of Michigan's private companies.

This survey highlights those companies who are leveraging sharp sales increases from market opportunity.

The survey solicits response from private companies and then calculates five-year compound annual rates of growth.

Those with the top 100 growth rates make the Michigan Private 100. In 1997, TTI was the 76th fastest growing company in Michigan.

The 1998 survey finds TTI moving up 30 positions to the 46th fastest growing company in Michigan.

TTI has been included on this honorary list four of the last five years.

Technical Training, Inc. is a global full-service provider of training resources to the motor vehicle and industrial manufacturing industries.
