Meeting of the minds: Frank Descenzo, director of leasing at Cleveland-based Kimco Realty Corp., explains what he knows about the future of the Farmer Jack store in downtown Farmington, as Farmington Mayor Mary Bush, at left, and other council members met Monday.

Susan DesMarais said the landlord and tenant have "been beating around the bush too damned much. We're all residents who aro sick and tired of this." She asid having a neighborhood groer close to downtown Farmington is imperative, not just for senior clitzens, either. "I have opilepsy," DesMarais said. "I can't drive. I don't know how I'm going to get to and from the grocery store." Farmington Assistant City Manager Bill Richards, on Tuesday, said the likelihood of the Farmer Jack closing for an extended period comes at an unfortunate time for the Downtown Farmington Center, only recently refurbished by Kimco. "It takes the shine off that," Richards said.

Parent Susan Justice of Farm-ington Hills was at the session daughter, Rachel. "They spand hours trying to figure out how to draw and they haven't yet been to an art class," Justice said. "They both love to draw and they love dinosaurs. And we've always enjoyed the library programs." Before the session, McCand-less was busy setting up her on the rows of long tables. "It's a fun activity," she explained. "The whole idea behind drawing complex things is to break them down into basic shapes. You can draw just about anything as long as you recog-nize the basic shapes that under-lie the more complex forms." ritici activities include the info bwing: ■ "Science Fun," 2 p.m. Jung 30, Farmington Hills branch. ■ Kids Day, noon-5 p.m. Jung T, in Shiawasee Park. ■ "Birds of Prey," noon, 1 and 2 p.m. July 14, in the Farming-ton Hills branch.

Handicapped parking for fest set

Salem United Church of Christ on Oakland Avenue in downtown Farmington will once again offer free parking to handi-capped persons during the Farm-ington Founders Festival, July ington 5-12.

And the popular subject mat-ter is really a no brainer. "Dinosaurs are so magical," added McCandless, who teaches at University-Liggett School. "They're cool, awesome forms."
