First Baptist ready for campers

BY RAND PEAT-TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

The staff at the First Baptist Church of Troy has ordered 250 dozen cookies and 150 gallons of Kool-Aid. Now they're just waiting for the children to arrive.

The church, located between Maple and Big Beaver on John R. will host "Neighborhood Bible Time" next week, Monday, July 27 through Friday, July 31.

The free program, marking its 14th summer this year, is for all area children from age 6 through the eighth grade, regardless of religious background or denomination.

"We've been doing this for a number of years and it's always been open to non-members of the church, especially children in the local neighborhoods," Paula Anderson, the pastor's assistant said.

Transportation is provided both to and from the church for local participants in designated areas. Children attending will be picked up at the corner nearest their home by clearly identified buses.

The program will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. so participants will be dropped off at the same corner shortly after the end of the days crusade.

This year's program at First Baptist is under the direction of associate pastor Steve Allen. Week long activities will include, dramatized stories, the "Booster Cheer," "Bible Time" baseball, refreshments, daily gifts and lots more.

It's not unusual for the church to host between 700-800 children throughout the week-long event.

"The children are welcome to come for one day or for all five,"

Anderson said. "We usually have a lot more at the end of the week than in the beginning. That's because kids go home and tell their friends about it."

A "Bible Time" staff of more than 150 adult volunteers from the church will provide supervision for the children attending the program.

"Most of the kids are signed up before so we know how many where are going to be picking up," Anderson said. "I think we end up with about eleven different bus routes."

Bible stories, singing songs, games and arts and crafts are enjoyed by the younger set. Older students have more religious-based games and a daily rally that includes the awarding of ribbons for reciting Bible verses.

"This is presented in a classroom setting and the children are divided up by age group," Anderson said.

Students enrolled in the free program are welcomed and encouraged to bring along friends throughout the week.

"The kids are pretty excited about this and just seem to enjoy being here and taking part," Anderson said. "And our goal here at the church is to promote God and show the children that they should honor God, their parents and their country."

The program will come to a close with a special awards presentation on Friday night, July 31.

Those interested in signing their children up for the program may call the church office to register and arrange transportation at (248) 689-4555.

Faith is not seasonal

FOCUS ON THEOLOGY

REV. TIMOTHY F. BARCOCK

At the end of the school year, when the youngsters of our parish leave school and formal religious education for the summer holiday, I always remind them, "There is no vacation from being a Christian!" The rector of the seminary college we attended while preparing for the priesthood used to remind us with a similar message as we left school for the summer each year. Whatever our religious persuasion is, I think there is a very basic lesson and message of our religious faith is not something that turns "on" or "off" with particular seasons or time of year. If religion is what is should be in our lives, it is not dependent on seasons or other changing realities. It is something that we live and practice wherever we are, or whatever we are doing.

Virtually every pastor can testify to the reality of the change in worship patterns during the summer months. Far fewer people find their way to church, synagogue or mosque. I want to note that I am very grateful to the majority who are faithful to their religious commitments during the summer, as at any other time. This does not stop me, however, as a pastor, from being concerned about those who set their religious practice aside for summer activity.

I realize that weekly worship is not the only barometer of faith commitment. I realize also that many people travel and attend church near their cottage or other place of summer enjoyment. This does not change the reality that many do not include worship in their vacation plans.

Whether or not formal worship is part of your life during holiday periods, such as the summer, this reflection is to suggest that a conscious relationship with God needs to be. Prayer, a unique form of acknowledging our relationship with Almighty God, should be part of the life of a person of faith every day. There are many ways we can pray. Formal worship is only one form, but it is a practice that often leads us to regular prayer throughout the week. There is no vacation from being a believer.

The regular acknowledgment of our relationship with God, even a number of times a day, is highly important in the life of a believer. It helps us to focus our values; it inspires us to make proper choices. It enhances our awareness of those around us and the world in which we live. Regular "lifting of the mind and heart to God" is a critically important practice for people of faith. It is nourishment we can't do without.

The summer provides unique opportunities to do the more peaceful and relaxing settings which vacations offer us, the time together with family and friends can be all sources of prayer, of connection with God. Rather than moving away from a conscious relationship with God, these experiences can direct us to prayer in new and different ways.

My concern is that, when we allow formal worship to move out of our lives for periods of time, we do the same with regular prayer. Our consciousness of the way we live our lives in relationship with, and accountability to, our Creator diminishes. The "virtuous" or "just" life which is what is a right, good and holy can become less important. Our strength to face the challenges of daily living is weakened.

The late, beloved Mother Teresa reflected: "Prayer enlarges the heart until it is capable of containing God's gift of Himself." Rabbi Abraham Heschel taught: "Prayer is a ladder on which thoughts mount to God." Harry Emerson Fosdick reminds us: "Prayer is putting oneself under God's influence." Finally, author Robert Kahn points out: "Prayer is a way of lifting ourselves, of getting a higher look, of transcending self. In prayer ones sees life as God sees it..."

Have a wonderful summer! But remember to keep in communion with God, through prayer, wherever you are. Summer, too, can be a blessed time!
