School stores help students stock up on business life

They profit from summer school project

n the real business world, retailers don't act up and shut down their shops several times a day.

But that's exactly what the proprietors of the "Scimonace Snacks" and "Popsmart' stores did – at a tenfold profit, too—during Farmington Summer School's economics class at Harrison High School.

During a heetic three-week period, concluding Thursday, July 16, students in teacher Richard Grieves' economics class carried tables of snacks and cold drinks into the hallway to sell to other summer school students during a daily handful of five-minute breaks.

And, when those breaks were over, they had to carry the tables back into the classroom again to ther than that, members of Grieves' class — with participants from Farmington, Harrison and North high schools — were seeing dollar signs from the experience.

"We're all like shareholders experience. ..."We're all like shareholders "We're all like shareholders because we put something into it," said North student Catherine Powell, one of 26 summer schoolers who chipped in $4 to get the two businesses established. That meant pre-ordering, stocking, selling and counting the money to determine exactly how profitable the stores were.

In business: Catherine Powell, who man-ages "Sci-monoce Snacks," oversces business while "employees Calvin Corey and Scott Post sell candy to fellow students. "Scimonoce" stands for economics, spelled backwards.

ECONOMICS

"We kept a ledger for the day," Powell continued. "It just taught us a lot about responsibility and how businesses are run."
Concurring was "Popsmart" comanager and North student Greichen Pitluck. She noted how students "learned about the free market and autonomy."
Both stores did very well, carning more than $1,100 in sales. Subtracting the original investment of $104, the class will donate the rest — about $1,000 - to the American Red Cross.
Grieves said the for-credit

$1,000 - to the American Red Cross.

Grieves said the for-credit class satisfies a state mandate for "authentic assessment," requiring that public schools teach students to apply economics terms and concepts. Students "did everything" toward reaching that goal, Grieves said.

One part of the business the students learned about was how sales don't always match projections.

tions.

According to North student Rachel Kasuboski, co-manager of "Popsmart" with Pitluck, a source of much exasperation was the student survey done the first week of summer school. Both stores relied on the survey to purchase start-up goods.

"In reality, they wanted more Coke instead of ice tea," Kasuboski said.

oski said.

That carried over to "Scimonoce," which is cconomics spelled backwards.

According to Harrison junior Marsha Henry, who did accounting for the snack shop, a detailed extra orders needed to be made on those items to keep up with sales.

Smart pop shop: Students Gretchen Pitluk and Caroline Womack sell soft drinks at "Fopsmart," one of two profitable Farmington Summer School businesses set up for three weeks at Harrison High School.

Conversely, "cookies didn't sell, not for a long time," lament-ed Henry.

But, noted Farmington High School student Lindsay Betts, both stores benefited from something that doesn't happen in real life. Their only competition was from a vending machine down

Hills police nab Traverse City woman after Rite-Aid robbery

A woman from a place cherries are popular may have picked the wrong place to commit a robbery. Farmington Hills police arrest ed a Traverse City woman, 42, after a holdup at a Rite Aid Sunday afternoon. Though no weapon was found, she has been charged with one count of armed woman, who pleaded not guilty at her arraignment Mon-day, is being held in Onkland County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond. A preliminary exam is set for 8:30 a.m. Friday at 47th Dis-for 8:30 a.m. Friday at 47th Dis-trict Court.

"Just because no weapon is involved, if it is implied, it meels the state (law) for armed rob-bery," Farmington Hills Assis-tant Chief Chuck Nebus said.

At 3:40 p.m., a woman ran up to a cashier and demanded all the money from the register at the store on 12 Mile and Farm-ington roads. The woman appeared to be concealing some-thing behind a black, backpack-type purse, the cashier told police.

After getting the money in a plastic bag, the woman said "thank you" and left. A 22-year-old female store employee estimated the thief made off with mated the thief made off with nearly 5500.

The robber fled in a yellow, Oldsmobile-type car driven by a non on northboom! Farmington Road.

Road.
Four minutes after the rob-bery, police stopped a 1983 Buick matching that description on southbound Orchard Lake, near the Old Orchard Thentro. Officers ordered the couple out at guspoint.
Inside the car, police found a plastic Rite Aid bag with a single dollar bill inside. A black leather bag on the passenger seat near-by had a large number of follar bills in small denominations.

In all, police recovered $478 in cash. No weapons were found. In their statements to police, the 47-year-old man said he and his 42-year-old wife drove from Traverse City to get away from the tourists. He wasn't aware his wife had been inverted in the robbery, police said.

However, the wife Laid they had been away from home for a couple of months to avoid an arrest warrant for her on a bad check charge.

Both admitted to having drug problems, which they said they support through the woman's shoplifting.

The woman told police she didn't intend to rob the Rite Aid, but saw the cashier by herself. She denied threatening the cashier or using a weapon.

The cashier told police the woman threatened to "blow her... brains out."

$150 Patron ticket includes the Auto Barons Gala at The Community House, gourmet cuisine, complimentary beverages, admission to the two rooftop locations, and shuttle valet parking.

For more information and tickets,

Variety, The Children's Charity at 248.258.5511

lasted by Children's Charities Caplition:The Child Abuse and leglect Council of Oakland County, The Community House, Orchards Children's Services, and Variety, the Children's Charity.

Calendar for 1998-99 school year taking shape

Farmington Public Schools' bargaining team has much nego-tiating to do before hammering out new contracts with unionized tiating to do before hammering out new contracts with unionized employees, most who are represented by the Michigan Education Association.

But both sides have agreed on cessential calendar dates for the 1998-99 school year, said Diane Bauman, the district's director of school and community relations.

Following are those dates which have been decided:

which have been decided:

Thursday, Aug. 27 - First day for teachers, "Teachers Work Day."

■ Friday, Aug. 28 — Districtwide in-service day; no students.
■ Monday, Aug. 31 — First day for atudents. It has not yet been determined whether students.
■ May 31 — Memoriai Day determined whether students. dents.

Monday, Aug. 31 - First day for students. It has not yet been determined whether students will attend half- or full-day sessions.

Nov. 26-27 - Thanksgiving break. Thursday, Dec. 24 through Sunday, Jan. 3 – December winter break, school is in session through Wednesday, Dec. 23 and reconvenes Monday, Jan. 4.

Feb. 15-19 – Mid-winter break, school is in session through Friday, Feb. 12 and

The last day of the school year has not yet been determined, nor have those for: parent-teacher conferences; the end of marking periods; and other key dates. Bauman said that information will be made public as soon as it becomes available.

Bauman added that the calenters are deep to found on the discussions.

We kept a ledger for the day. It just taught us a lot about responsibility and how busi-

Catherine Powell

stores.
"This experience has been extremely valuable because it presents real life situations and allows students to develop strategies and solve problems that would make their project successful," Koponen said.

About 300 middle-school and high-school students attend the summer school, for those who want to take an accelerated learning path, Koponen said.

TICKETS ARE LIMITED

the hell.

"I expected everything to take off (sales-wise) because we were the only ones selling," she said.
Farmington Summer School principals Kurt Campbell and Steve Koponen enthusiastically supported the student-run stores.

Rock-n-Roll with Marilyn Monroe, Lucy, Elvis and many more at the first annual Cruise Preview Party — Revvin' on the Rooftops

3 venues in downtown Birmingham:

Old Woodward parking structure Chester Street parking structure The Community House

$100 Friend ticket to the two rooftop locations includes entertainment galore, a strolling supper, fun foods and two complimentary beverages

