CHAPTER IX. To the boaryard and ship-chandlew-ing establishment of a cortain Mr. Hurtable in the twin of Falthavit, on the establishment of a certain Mr. Hurtable in the twin of Falthavit, on the estern bank of the Accidence river, there came—or, rather, drifted with the tide of a casual facty—to-ward the close of a day, in June, Gar-rett Coast. A deciling ann threw bis shadow athwart the floor of the chandlery. Hurtable glanced up from the muddle of papors on his deak. Coast lounged estalls in the doorway, with one-shoul-der against the frame; a man notably dail and shouldry. In the Hurtable un-derstanding, with clothing weil-worn and travel-stained.
