It was a good day for Catholic Central runners overall. Matt Dely of Livonia was fourth; DiGiovanni, a neighbor of Jess, finished fifth and Jeff Heller sixth.

But where was CC cross country and track coach Tony Magni, another resident of Farmington Hills?

"Actually, he's in Italy," Jess said. "I'm sure he would've run."

He runs the Northville race, the Roadrunner Classic. He tries to get out to as many road races as he can.

Jess expects to be back next year to attempt to defend his title.

"I'll probably make it a tradition," he said. "My uncles used to run the race in the '80s. I don't think they ever won it, but they were right up there when it was a 10K. I sure I'll make a tradition of it with Johnny."

The 20-year-old Hampton is a former all-state cross country runner at Novi High School. UM-DeAnn doesn't have cross country or track teams, but Hampton remains a dedicated runner, putting in 30 to 35 miles per week.

It was Hampton's first time in the Founders Festival race and the first time she ran a four-mile race. She ended up winning by eight seconds of Julie Mielke of Harper Woods.

"There were three of us running together most of the race," said Hampton, referring to Mielke and former Farmington Hills School star Kate Adams, who finished fifth. "Julie and I kept pushing each other the last mile, and I just kicked it in at the end."

"I didn't know what to expect, because I hadn't run that race before. But I thought (her time) was pretty good for me."

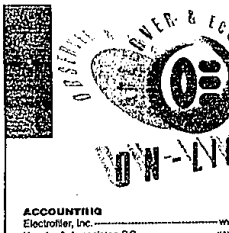

"It went by pretty fast. There weren't any big hills, so that was pretty good. I was just running the race, focusing on people in front of me and trying to pass people if I could."

Block, the father of Rob Block, the former Livonia Stevenson running star and 1997 Founders Festival race winner, started the nonprofit Michigan Running Foundation to help inner-city or disadvantaged athletes.

The Foundation uses its share of race proceeds to provide scholarships for quality athletes who might otherwise be overlooked.

The Running Foundation is planning a 5K race at Heritage Park in Farmington for Sunday, Oct. 10. For more information, runners can call the Farmington Hills parks and recreation office at 473-8670.
