What's the one book everybody has in the library?
Why, Noah Webster's dictionary, of course!
But Webster's is more than a dictionary. It's the 13-year-old Farmington got renamed. Webster would be proud to know that the old wife is the mother's book in the Farmington Town Branch Library.

The judges of the Name the Old Contest agreed and the eighth-grade Sweet City Junior-Senior Middle School in Farmington bested all other entries to win the contest. The winning entry was "The Old Webster's Dictionary".

Baumgartner, and one who likes to have things as easy as possible to the library, was presented with a stuffed owl and a gift certificate to Borders Books and Music for $25.00 on Dec. 1 at the library.

Webster the electronic, Great Horned Owl resides in one of the new taxa at the entrance to the children's area in the recently remodeled library.

When visitors approach, Webster greets them with "Welcome to the Farmington Branch Library" on wings and hooves - a pair of legs resting on a sign from Sally Gains, Children's Library department head.

Workers sought for 2000 census

Census takers and crew leaders for the Farmington and Farmington Hills area are needed for temporary, part-time government jobs that last two to eight weeks. The salary is $13.75-$15.25 per hour. A minimum of 20 hours per week is required.

Applicants must pass a 30-minute multiple choice test to be considered for employment. The test will be given at noon every Monday and Thursday starting Jan. 3 at Farmington Hills City Hall.

What's the one book everybody knows is at the library? Baumgartners, and one who likes to ride her bicycle as often

Why, Noah Webster's dictionary, of course, said Katie Baumgardner.

The 13-year-old Farmington girl reasoned, Webster would be the right name for the book that would be in the Children's Room in the Farmington Branch Library.

The judges of the Name the Book Contest agreed and the eighth-grader from Our Lady of Sorrows Middle School in Farmington bested out almost 500 other entries to win the contest.

She was crowned the Clifford

Book Contest winner as possible to the library, was the first to receive a gift certificate to Borders Books & Music during a ceremony Nov. 1 at the library.

She was joined by Great-grandmother, who is in the of the trees at the entrance to the children's area in the recently remodelled library.

With a warm approach, Webster greets them by flapping his wings and hooting.
