

Farmington 'Y' goodbye

Farewell...for now: Kevin Bush (at center) talks with well-wishers John Kidel, Sheri Gelman and Bob Maxfield during a going away reception at the Farmington YMCA Dec. 17. Bush, the longtime director of the Farmington 'Y' won't be going far: He'll oversee fund-raising for the Detroit Metropolitan YMCA, which is the organization's regional headquarters.

want to be here for a long time." Doing the ribbon-cutting honors was Farmington Mayor Mary Bush, complimented Petros. "You've really added to our community and (you've) brought something that, quite frankly, we didn't have before," Bush said. What Petros previously had was a cigar store. Now, following the expansion and renovation, he has a "destination" shop for more-upscale customers, said Ronald Oglesby, president of the Farmington Downtown Development Authority. "As opposed to a chain-type store, which is similar no matter where you go, this is a draw, a unique store," said Oglesby, among the celebrants at the grand opening. Petros described his business as "upper class, this is not a place for teenagers." The humidor remains in the cigar side of the emporium, which suits customers such as Dan Thifault. But now that he's seen what Petros has to offer in the wine side, he likes the place even better. "I think it's great," Thifault said. "...I've bought a couple things from the other (wine) side. I'll buy some wine from him." Just a few of the items on sale at the store include: Gekkeikan plum wine, imported from Japan; snacks such as "Ladybugs," chocolate-covered cookies and Walkers shortbread; hot peppers in designer, decorative bottles. The endeavor wasn't always such a delight for Petros. Following relatively easy approval from the city of Farmington, he had to wrestle with the Michigan Liquor Control Commission for a license to sell packaged beer and wine. "He (Petros) had an uphill battle getting his license," noted Oglesby. There was difficulty matching the available license with the intended use, Petros said. And the state would not allow Petros to expand his original store into one business that sold cigar, wine, imported beer and gourmet-type foods. With no other option, Petros (with manager Ron Shamoun) took over the adjacent storefront and opened separate, side-by-side businesses, with different names and addresses. But customers can easily move from one side to the other, through an indoor archway. Even though customers can purchase items from both sides, and pay for them at the same time, Petros emphasized that, through bookkeeping, sales will be earmarked either for one store or the other. That doesn't bother clerk May Bazny, who will ring up customers from both the cigar and wine sides. "I like both sides, actually," she said. "Especially the wine side. It's beautiful." The Cigar Emporium and Wine Emporium stores are located between Harmony House and Starbucks Coffee in the Downtown Farmington Center, Grand River east of Farmington Road.
