FARMINGTON — FARMINGTON HILLS SPORTS SCENE

Farmington volleyball

Farmington High was a semifinalist in a volleyball tournament at Cadillac High Dec. 29, losing a two-hour match to Allegan, 14-12, 14-16.

Traverse City Central was the eventual winner of the eight-team tournament.

The Falcons finished first in pool play based on total points. They defeated Cheboygan, 15-3, 15-6, and split with Leroy Pine River, 15-8, 10-15, and Cadillac, 15-17, 15-4.

Farmington advanced in the play-offs with a quarterfinal win over Manton, 15-9, 15-9.

"The loss was a mild disappointment, but we took first in our pool and lost to a good team in an extremely close match," Farmington coach Alex Perrin said. "We can't be ashamed of the last match. There were no easy points for either team."

"It's hard not to like this team. We don't have a lot of big hitters. Every point we get we earn the hard way. It's fun to coach a team like this."

Senior setter Meghan O'Rear recorded 89 kill assists, as well as 11 digs, 40 service points and nine blocks.

Junior Lynday Howard led the Falcons with 33 kills and 25 blocks. She also had a 2.6 serve-receive average on a 3.0 scale.

Overcoming the flu to play in the tournament, senior Melissa Myty contributed 35 points and 18 kills from her outside hitter position.

"Three of our five outside hitters couldn't be there, so we were down to two," Perrin said. "In pool play, we were playing kids out of position, so we could save Myty for the playoffs."

Sophomore Julie Kimmel had 18 kills and 12 blocks, and senior Tricia Krause had 17 kills. Kimmel rated 2.2 on serve receive and Krause 2.1.

Farmington is 6-3-3 in all matches.

Raiders still quality swim team

Team leader: Senior Jim Gabriel is one of three captains on the North Farmington swim team, which anticipates a good season.

With some experienced swimmers returning, North Farmington could have another good year in 2000. Farmington High and Harrison have a combined team this year. The unified squad earned its first victory Tuesday night.

The early line on the 2000 boys swim season is North Farmington should have another solid team despite the loss of one of the state's top swimmers.

Matt Zald, who was all-state in two freestyle events, ended his high school career as did other key performers, but the Raiders return some quality swimmers, too.

Leading this year's team are senior captains Jim Gabriel, Jon Zald and Brandon Dugan.

Gabriel, who just missed qualifying for state in the backstroke, was fifth in the Western Lakes Activities Association meet in that event and the 200-yard freestyle.

He also was part of North's WLAA championship medley relay team and the 400 freestyle relay team that finished first but was disqualified.

Zald's specialty is the breaststroke, having finished fifth in the league finals, but he'll have to help the Raiders in some other areas this year, too, coach Pat Duthie said.

Dugan is an outstanding freestyle and a good butterfly who will play a key role in relays, too. He was second in the WLAA in the 200 and 100 freestyle events.

The senior class also includes Chris Clayton, Jared Goldman, Jon Vincent and John Kern. Dan Bowman plans to move out west at the semester break.

Goldman is a fourth-year diver who was 13th in the WLAA when teammates Jon Lebovic and Justin Goodwin were unable to compete. Vincent is a first-year diver.

Kern specializes in the backstroke in which he placed ninth in the league meet.

Junior Adam Farber is one of the top swimmers who went to state in the breaststroke last year.

He was eighth in that event in the WLAA and fifth in the butterfly. He was on the first-place medley relay team, too.

Farmington gymnastics team faces rebuilding task in 2000

Duplicating its level of success last season will be difficult for a Farmington unified gymnastics team in transition.

Farmington, which finished sixth in the state a year ago, has gone from being a veteran, experienced squad to a young, inexperienced one.

Graduation losses included Brook Rubin, Anna Clark and Liz Stoler, and senior Jamie Miltello and junior Lauren Ouellette did not return for this season.

Farmington does have sophomores Chelsey Keesling and Kristin Ulewicz back, and they represent the team's only real high school experience.

Keesling was a first-team, All-Observer gymnast, as were Rubin and Clark, and Ulewicz earned second-team honors along with Miltello and Ouellette.

We have a really young team this year, and we need some of that experience," coach Jeff Dwyer said. "Lauren was one of our top bars and vault scorers, and Jamie was sometimes our No. 1 beam."

Furthermore, due to rules that prohibit club gymnasts from competing in more than two club meets after their first high school competition, Keesling won't be available until the end of January.

Dwyer considers Keesling to be one of the top 15 Division I gymnasts in the state and expects her to score well at the end of the season again.

In last year's state meet, Keesling tied for ninth place on beam, 10th in floor exercise and 11th on vault. In the Western Lakes Activities Association meet, she was seventh in all-around scoring (35.65).

"She's still working out with both teams," Dwyer said. "She's a very good competitor, so I expect the same thing. Her level of difficulty will be higher."

"Her vault will be stronger. She was just learning a Tsukahara vault at the end of last year. She'll be doing those more consistently."

"That event has picked up the most, but she can do a back flip on beam. Last year she was doing just hand springs."

Ulewicz is another all-arounder who indicated she is going to have a good season based on strong performances in two December dual meets.

Farmington defeated Dearborn Edsel Ford, 128.9 to 107.65, but lost to Grosse Pointe North, 124.3 to 119.7.

"She's back to where she was; she's stronger than last year," said Dwyer of Ulewicz. "She's a nice consistent gymnast to have back. She's doing remarkably well for not working out over the summer."

Farmington also has senior Jenny Galbraith, who can hit eight on vault, bars and floor, according to Dwyer, senior Caroline Dean and sophomore Annie Lieberman, another all-arounder.

Dwyer has 10 freshmen on the team and will be
