

Nationwide ACES campaign involves Farmington youth

Many elementary schools in the Farmington district, as well as St. Paul's Lutheran School, participated May 3 in the All Children Exercising Simultaneously (ACES) With-a-Friend campaign.

The statewide, school-centered event surpassed the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness, Health and Sports goal of 200,000 participants during National Fitness Week.

More than 216,000 children and adults from over 600 Michigan elementary schools were involved in fitness activities at their schools.

Michigan shattered the national record last year with 143,070 participating. The previous record of 70,000 was held by Illinois.

The one-day event, which was underwritten by Farm Bureau Insurance, was chaired by Michigan State University men's basketball head coach Tom Izzo.

The program's mission is to bring attention to the importance of lifelong physical activity in everyone's life.

"I am proud to be a part of the ACES program, because it helps bring attention to the importance of physical activity in our lives," Izzo said.

"It's great to have your team rated in the top 10, but when the state you've lived in all your life is rated in the top 10 for obesity, that's a problem."

"With the endless opportunities for physical activity that Michigan has to offer, and we are tied for fourth place in obesity ratings."

The importance of ACES and the fitness message it provides is essential in working toward a healthier future.

Forty percent of Michigan's children are overweight, and 39 percent of Michigan children have elevated cholesterol levels compared to the national average of 25 percent.

"We need to motivate people to be more physically active, or the obesity epidemic is going to ruin the lives of a lot of people," said Marilyn Lieber, Governor's Council on Physical Fitness Director of Special Events and Projects.

"Although we don't expect a one-day event, I think ACES will change everyone's life and suddenly make them more active, we hope we can draw enough attention to this to spread the message of the many health benefits of regular physical activity."

Mark Terman, Executive Director of the Michigan Fitness Foundation, is enthusiastic about the statewide numbers and continued success of ACES.

"We hoped to have 70,000 participating last year and ended up shattering the national record with over 143,000 participants," Terman said. "ACES is an excellent opportunity for people to recognize the impact of physical activity and understand its importance and long-term effects on health."

ACES was founded by New Jersey physical education teacher Len Saunders in 1989. He wanted to encourage his students to be more physically active.

Saunders set out to encourage at least one school in each state to join in this effort and as a result of his letter-writing campaign, 250,000 students from all 50 states were part of the first
