POINTS OF VIEW

Reforms beginning to yield results

thigan fifth and eighth graders across the board improved their scores in the Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests for science, writing and social studies, specording to scores released last week.

Farmington's fifth- and eight-grade science, social studies and writing MEAP marks, for itample, were superior to state-wide scores. Fifth-grade results remained stable in all areas incorpored to last year. Eighth- mark last year.

compared to last year. Eighth-grade scores, how-ever, increased in science and social studies, but ever, increased in science and social studies, but decreased in writing.

What is particularly significant across the state is the long-term trend. By and large, scores are far higher than they were when the MEAP test became the instrument of choice for assessing studies. dent performance. Interestingly, some of the biggest gains have come from districts Lansing is now considering for takeover, such as Hamtramck and insister.

Various authorities greeted the report with enthusiasm. Local school officials say it's because teachers and teaching methods are improving. State school authorities say the school system is finally beginning to make real progress in reform. Gov. John Engler, who directed the takeover of the Detroit schools, says it's because schools are realizing the governor is serious schools are realizing the governor is scrious.

'Whatever. When the news is good, everybody is spitiled to take a chunk of the credit.

'Although it's tough to do and takes a long time, reforming the public schools is not rocket science.

Reformers proposed a sensible model for improvement years ago. First, you decide what kids are supposed to learn at various grades while they are linehoal. Second was assessable this do. in fact. sipposed to learn at various grades while they are in school. Second, you assess what kids do, in fact, learn; in Michigan, that's called the MEAP. Third, you release these scores—district by district, school building by school building—to the public to a sto ensure accountability. Fourth, you demand that schools respond to the results by läpproving teaching methods and materials. Fifth, you make it clear that you are resolute in staying in the path of reform.

on the path of reform:

'The main point to seize firmly – especially right now, before all the pro- and anti-voucher propaganda hits – is that the school reform model faworking in Michigan. Kids are learning more, kirtually across the board.

..That's very, very good news. It's important to realize that most of our schools were not so bad to start with and have improved considerably over the past decade. The districts with real problems have been the very prish and the very rural. In the case of urban dis-tricts like Detroit, where the outrageous politics of lehool governance got in the way of good schools, disastic measures like the state takeover appear to districts, where geographic isola-tion limits resources of all kinds, a technology fix such as increased reliance on computers and the Internet may offer hope. State Board of Education President Dorothy Beardmore, one of the unsung heroes of school reform in Michigan, is delighted.

"What these scores show is that standards-based education reform works because it makes sense to specify what kids should know at various stages in their education career," she says.

"All this goes back a long way," Beardmore continues. "It started in 1991 when we established model curriculum outcomes. In 1995, we established standards. We worked on the MEAP test and gradually turned it into an accurate assessment of what kids learn. And now were starting to some real progress as all this trickles into to see some real progress as all this trickles into every classroom in Michigan."

Beardmore's right. Improving an entire school system in a state as big as Michigan doesn't hap-pen overnight. "People are beginning to figure pen overnignt. reopie are beginning to figure they might as well get on board because stan-dards-based education reform is not going to go away," she says. "Some years ago, people in the Legislature were talking about a anymore."

In fact, the numbers of pupils taking the MEAP tests are going up, ovidently in large part because of Gov. Engler's bright idea of linking success on the junior year MEAP to a $2,500 Merit Award scholarship to college. Starting in the 2000-01 school year, eighth graders can earn $500 in school year, eighting graders can earn $000 in scholarship money to attend a public college in Michigan by scoring well on the MEAP. A small irony amidst all this encouraging news: Folks at the Michigan Board of Education have yet to receive the official MEAP scores report.

Administrative responsibility for the MEAP was transferred from the state board to the Department of the Treasury last year. Beardm learned about the current results by reading the newspapers.

Maybe the next step in school reform should be to tidy up some bureaucratic organization charts so the right hand knows what the left hand is

Phil Power is chairman of HomeTown Communications Network Inc., the company that owns this newspaper. He welcomes your comments, either by voice mail at (734) 953-2047, ext. 1880, either by voice mail at (734) 953-2047, e or by e-mail at ppower@hamecomm.net

Can't beat 'em? Then join them love a parade.

Where I come from, parades are a tradition, the proud hallmark of every community with gumption enough to organize the veterans' color guard, a high school band, a few Scout troops, a horse and a clown or two for a march down Main Street. I've been to harvest festival parades, Memorial Day parades, threshing bee parades and waterama parades. There's just something about the fire Increa just something about the fire trucks, the cavalcade of sports cars bearing local dignitaries, pageant queens and school kids and the beat of the bass drum that draws me like a magnet. Which is why I volunteered to cover this year's Farmington Family Fest paged.

That, and everybody else already had plans for Saturday.

In any case, I arrived in the office Friday morning to discover my plum assignment was about to become a bit sticky. And it had noth-ing to do with the thunderstorms forecast for Saturday morning.

Saturday morning.

Our newspaper ran a column last Thursday written by the chairwoman of the FarmingtonFarmington Hills Multi-Cultural Multi-Racial Community Council. The organization has been lobbying the Family Fest board and area Shriners to eliminate one of the Shriners' parade entries — an Old West, shoot 'em up, cowboys and Indians extravaganza.

ganza.
The problem, Karen Bolsen said, is the re-enactment perpetuates old, inaccurate stereo-types. She pointed out some historical truths d criticized the Shriners for poking fun at and criticized the Shriners for poking fun at Native American culture.

Bolsen's right. That clearly seems contrary to the spirit of this community. Few cities are more culturally aware than Farmington and Farmington Hills. Civic and elected leaders make a concerted and very public effort toward inclusion, sulturally understanding and toward inclusion, cultural understanding and Children in Farmington Public Schools speak an astounding 80 languages. The coun-cil, formed 10 years ago in response to diver-sity issues arising in our schools, has successfully launched a number of programs, includ-ing their renowned "Rainbow Breakfast," to encourage an appreciation and understanding encourage an appreciation and understanding among people of different nationalities, creeds One MCMR council member, Bolsen said.

pointed out if the Shriners had re-enacted lynching in the Deep South, the debate w end with the first volley. That's certainly true.

But nobody played "whites lynching blacks" as children. Well, nobody in MY neighborhood.

Many of us, however, played "cowboys and Indians." Kids still do. Those unenlightened, pre-1970s movies and television series air every day of the week on one of the 182 channels available on your satellite dish.

I'm not saying that makes this right. I'm saying it makes it understandable.

I'm not even eaying this is reasonable. I'm saying we can discuss it in a reasonable way. So there I stood ... or eat, rather, on a land-saying we can discuss it in a reasonable way. So there I stood ... or ast, rather, on a land-scaping boulder in front of a strip mall on Grand River, watching the parade go by. Perspiring in the muggy beat. Holding my breath. As far as I knew, the Shriners were breath. As far as I knew, the Shriners were still planning to show up, even though there had been rumblings they might not.

Wasn't long before the first group of them marched by, and then the stagecoach, accompanied by motorcyclists dressed up as cowboys, cavalrymen, bandits and Native Americans. I watched as the guys dressed in bucksikin whooped it up a little and the ones wearing 10-gallon hats fired their guns into the air. The bandits pretended to fall dead after being whot while attempting to rob the stage.

Personally, I don't like either racial streed-typing or violence, make believe or otherwise.

Fersonally, I can I like either racial stereo-typing or violence, make-believe or otherwise. If they gave me a vote, I'd sak the Shrinors not to run that particular group in the Farm-ington Family Fest parade. Trouble is, I don't get a vote. The festival board of directors made a decision to allow the Shriners to continue, despite the opposing

Those of us who just don't feel right about it are left with a couple of options. A picket line, a boycott, letters to the editor ... all handy tools for a protest.

Then there's the old, "If you can't best 'em, join 'em approach."

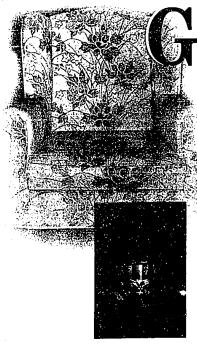

If the Shriners come back next year with their guns blazing, maybe the Mult-Cultural Multi-Racial Council ought to put on a little show of its own. Their parade entry wouldn't have to be anything big and brassy. Only menningful. That's what the council and its dedicated members do best.

I'd offer to belp, Unfortunately, I'm booked again to over next year's parade.

Everybody else already has plans.

Go figure.

Joni Hubred is a Farmington Observer staff writer who covers the city of Farmington Hills.

Offer does not apply to Real Estate, Apartments, Employment or Garage Sale ads. Participants must purchase three ads aithough it may take only one or two ads to sell the item(s) advertised.

Got stuff? Stuff you don't need anymore. Stuff that's been piling up in the garage, > your hometown newspaper. We're so sure you'll be able to sell your stuff with three ads, that if you don't, we'll run your ad three more times free.

or the basement or the attic. Get rid of it with with a classified ad in Sell it in three or we'll run it for freethree more times!

How can you beat that?

You can't!

So, what you do is this:

Tell us you want our special three-ad deal, then if, heaven forbid!, your stuff is still sitting around after the first three have run, call us and let us know and we'll run your ad absolutley free in the next three editions of your hometown newspaper!

Oakland County: 248-644-1070 Wayne County: 734-591-0900 Rochester, Rochester Hills: 248-852-3222 Clarkston, Lake Orlon, Oxford, Waterford: 248-475-4596

