Planners turn down 14 Mile projects

Farmington Hills Planning Commission members stuck to their guns Thursday, denying re-soning requests for two properties involved in a Planned Unit Development in the 14 Mile/Northwest-era/Crchard Lake area.

Lowe's Home Conters asked that 13.8 of the 15.8 acres over which the many has control be retained from RA-4, Single Family Residential, OS-1 Office Service and F-1/Parking, to B-3 General Business District. Representing the company, Rick Ratner told Planning Commission members the request fit with the city's Master Plan.

"We are almost surrounded completely by non-residential zoning," he said, citing just one area of residential properties to the south. Forty-eight percent of what we are asking to zone B-3 is non-residential now."

The land on the south side of Northwestorn and east of Orchard Luke Roads is already included in a proposed Planned Unit Development that will be reviewed by Hills Council members at their Jan. 22 meeting. Planning consultant Claude Coates said the request did represent a change in the Master Plan.

"I think the intent of the Master Flan was setting forth land use patterns if the area was developed as a whole," he said. "The Master Plan doesn't really designate areas for separate land use. Officials wanted commercial properties in that area developed as a whole, to avoid locking in neighboring residential subdivisions, Coates explained. His report recommended denial because a change in the Master Plan should only be accomplished through the PUD process, he said.

Ratner said the Master Plan showed the property within a "Special Planning Area," and while the proposed rezoning wasn't an exact fit, it had a fair proximity to the uses allowed. He said the Low's 15-acro parcel is north of existing homes and wouldn't impact the redevelopment of the Glen Acres subdivision.

He also argued the only way the whole area would be developed at once is if all the property owners sign off on the PUD agreement. The rezoning, however, would be a "no lose" proposi-tion, he said. If the other properties are developed an a retail center, Lowe's fits as a commercial use, and if the land is left undeveloped, the Lowe's regaining would still fit with the Master Plan. Asked why the company had request-ed B-3 zoning rather than B-2, Ratner said, "We would consider B-2. We took B-3 because it allowed a greater lati-tude."

Later in the evening, commissioners also denied a request by Phoenix Land Development and Grand Sakwa Prop-

Rezoning $done \ deal$ - almost

BY TOM SMITH STAFF WRITER

It's just a formality.

Tuesday's rezoning decision by the Farmington City Council concerning a property on Oakland Street is final barring an unprecedented reversal according to city officials.

But there is one more detail to take care of during the 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 5 council meeting. That night, the council inkely will adopt a zoning map ordinance amendment for the rezoning of 33432 Oaks under Street. The rezoning was approved Tuesday by a 4-to-1 vote, with the amendment simultaneously introduced.

Pending adoption of the zoning map amendment, Baker Street.

F ritical. To that end, Red Cross regional donor representative Joann Lindquist is keeping her fingers crossed that the month-long pattern of increased donations will continue at Thursday's open blood drive at the Farmington Hills Fire Department. The blood drive is from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the department's headquarters, on Orchard Lake south of 11 Mile roads. Open blood drives enable anyone to set up an appointment to donate, as long as they meet criteria such as being age 17 or older, healthy and weighing at least 110 pounds.

"It is real important, we're in such a shortage," Lindquist said last week.

Renovation plans upset

Quick response: Farmington Hills firefighters made short work of a fire on Tall Timber Tuesday afternoon, near a hom that is being renovated. Contractors discovered the blaze, which fire officials believe started in construction materials sitting next to the home. The cause of the fire hasn't been determined, it damaged wires leading from the ground into the electrical meter.
