Local student is finalist in journalism Olympics

Armington High School student Sarah Stewart is one of 15 finalists in FecusifOPE's Journalism Olympia.

She competed with 127 other high school students for scholarship money during the event at Fecus:HOPE Center for Advanced Technologies in Detroit on March 21.

Journalism Clympics is a daylong event in which high school juniors and seniors visit Focus:HOPE to tour, interview and compose a story before a 5:30 p.m. deadline. Media professionals from the area act as mentors for the competition; others judge the submissions. Without knowledge of an author's identity or school, 15 top stories, thus 15 finalists, are chosen. The top three winners receive medals and scholarships for $2,000, $1,000 and $500 respectively. Finalists receive $50.
