A summer of surfing without getting wet

By Alice Rhein
Staff Writer

OK, the gig is up. Party's over.

August is coming to a close, and thus begins the unofficial end of summer.

Where did it go, you ask?

I'm wondering the same thing. You see, even though you've seen my smirking face every Sunday throughout the summer, I haven't been at work.

No, through the miracles of modern technology, I've been sending in my stories to my trusty copy editors while I've been home nursing my new cutie pie.

Yep, everyone thinks it's been a summer of bon bons and soap operas for me. But you moms among us know better.

Let's just say that when I wanted to do a phone interview with the former director of the Louvre, and his press agent said he only would do interviews between 8 and 10 in the morning French time, I said, no problem. The likelihood that I'd be up at 2 a.m. to soothe a crying baby was high, so why not chat with our allies abroad?

Sleep deprived or ot, there is absolutely nothing more special than spending those first precious months with a new baby. But I did miss out on a summer vacation, which usually involves large cities and numerous art galleries.

Next Best Thing

So I did the next best thing. I took a virtual vacation via some pretty great gallery Web sites.

I still think the Detroit Institute of Arts has one of the most comprehensive visual resources Web sites as it continues to catalog its collection on www.diamondial.org

Many works that you wouldn't find on the walls are shown on the site, including some by local artists including Dirk Bakker and Stephen Goodfellow.

Virtual Whitney

But I wanted to be a little more adventuresome on my virtual voyage, so I logged onto www.whitney.org to see what was up at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City. Last summer, I spent the afternoon traipsing through the galleries at the biennial, and was most impressed by the work of Joseph Grigely, a deaf artist.

It is relevant to note his hearing impairment because his work consists of 2,500 handwritten notes on scrapes of paper lining the walls of an oval room. The notes chronicle 10 years of conversations he's had, and makes visual we interpret as an aural experience.

As I logged onto the site, I found that this year, Grigely is having his largest installation to date at the Whitney restaurant in Detroit, which is also featuring two other blockbuster exhibits, Wayne Thiebaud's retrospective and Mies van der Rohe's North American architectural projects.

Another exhibit I found out I missed this summer was at the Dia Center for the Arts in New York. Bridget Riley, whose abstract op-art paintings I tried to replicate in my Barbie house, in the '60s, was featured there this summer, and the Web site www.diacenter.org gives viewers a taste of art from her perspective.

Next, it was off to Chicago to see what was happening at the Field Museum, www.fieldmuseum.org

No, it's not an art gallery, but until Nov. 4, the natural history museum is featuring sets, masks and costumes by Julie Taymor, award-winning director of Broadway's *
