The Observer & Eccentric/ SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23, 2001

about a month before the acci-dent, along with Kevin's parents. Before then, the family lived in an apartment in Farmington. Kovin had been working as a maintenance man at Chatham Hills apartments and was trying to get his own painting business off the ground. "They will not be able to keep the house," Booth said, adding the owner has treated the family very well and been helpful in the transition. The youngest boys, ages 7 and

F AVKK

5, have had some problems, Booth said, and may need some counseling. Tenchers have been very helpful and their mother is doing her best to give them love rominded that he's gone. "I find myself totally forget-ting, and then suddenly l'll: remember Kevin's dead, and I'll never see him again," Booth said. "That's how it keeps hitting me." Robin Firlik of Small World Day Care Center in downtown Farmington, which has spear-headed a fund-raising drive to help the family, said many peo-ple have reached out to help this family. Small World employees are organizing a benefit dance. "One of the people he used to work with gave $3,000," Firlik said Friday. "I just had some people drop off gifts this morn-ing. I's really been wonderful." and support, but the loss runs very deep. Boath said they were especial-ly close to their father, and he Several parents told her Kevin Mad helped with a field trip at his youngest son's school, and when he put the bay on the bus for daycare, the two shared a kiss through the bus window. Others shared with her that Kevin played a great "Santa" at their children's day care center. "He wasn't perfect, but in a lot of ways, I learned things about him I didn't know," Booth said. For her, missing Kovin comes at odd times, They didn't speak every day and woren't together often, as she's not always blood-alcohol level at the une of the accident. Perry suffered blunt force, injuries and died en route to St. Mary Mercy Hospital. Ho was a painter, a maintenance man and had four children.

Driver faces trial in death of former Farmington man

had four children. Coombs, who was arraigned in district court on Dec. 7, entered a not guilty plea at that time and was released after positiof: 10 percent of a $10,000 bond. The foloury charge carries ar maximum sentence of 15 years in jail and, or fines ranging between $2,600 and $10,000; said Wiacek.

In that insolve ower jog to become be treated by improving a mountaint exists as in a conservation of divide the setting in the hands and test. The effect is to make you immobile and destroy your vortaints existing in the hands and test. The effect is to make you immobile and destroy your vortaints existing as the condition black. Only not setting the setting of the test of the effect is to make you immobile and destroy your as debiating as the condition black. Only not setting the model has beyond a reasonable they how a solve is a bad case of and basies one-time well go areasy hours to consider the produm is agoing to condition go to the hand, and you behavioration combines into weaks, and a deceministic setting, behavioration hand to make the display the condition to the own to not a deceministic setting the reasonable the makes in the total bad on the display to the own the setting of the own the production as the production makes in the display to the display to the own to makes, and a deceministic setting through the makes in the display the display to the own to own of the test of the functions the test of the functions the test of the display to the setting the setting the test of the display. The test of the display the test of the display the setting the setting the test of the display the setting the test of the display the display. The test of the display the setting the display the test of the display the test of the display the display. The test of the display the display the display the display the display the display the set of the display the disp onten, you and there (b) and the duration of lating are served something you must learn a thirst this sufficience and aching as something you must learn a driweiss.yournd.con

٠

BY STACY JENKINS STAFF WRITER jenkin eðo-konæcomm.net A 26-year-old Livonia woman, who is charged in the death of a Livonia motorcycilat, waived her reliminary cam in Weatland's 18th District Court on Thureday. District Judge C. Charles Bokos bound Emily Yvonno Coombs over for trial in circuit court. An arrigment on infor-mation is scheduled for Jan. 3 in Wayne County Circuit Court, according to David Wiacek, dis-trict curt administrator. Toombs is charged with oper-ating a vehicle under the influ-ence of liquor, causing death, in Job. 5 accident on Wayne Road, north of Ford Road. According to police records, Coombs was leaving Westland Bow It about 11:30 p.m. and other two men who did not respond to the letter, but Dwyer said it's possible they moved away. "It doesn't mean they are on the run, "he said. Whether any of the informa-fol will be determined by federal

Help from page A1

