Discover mystery of 'Point Deception'

Oliverex.

Don't expect to meet up with any of these in "Point Deception," however. On its pages, we are introduced, instead, to Northern California sheriff deputy Rhoda Swift, who lives and works in a strange apot haunted by its past. Rhoda, a native of the place, is haunted as well — although she's trying hard to make a "norma" life for herself when the story opens. In Soledad County, exactly 13 years earlier, six people (including two children) were massacred, and the crime remains unsolved — thanks, in part, to snafus committed by Rhoda herself. Now it appears that perhaps a serial killer has begun to strike again. A beautiful stranded motorist is found strangled, and shortly thereafter, two longtime citizens of the area are found dead in remote parts of Cascada Canyon, the same place where the original murders took place. As Rhoda tries to unravel varied threads of the mystery, it looks more and more as if the killer is no stranger passing through. The residents of the fictional county entertain 'fears and suspicions that a monster ... (lives) among them.' And so do we.

Enter a New York journalist named Guy Newberry, who comes to Soledad County in order to write of the earlier massacres. Wouldn't you just know it, he's soon involved in solving the murders? Finally, wouldn't you just know it, he's soon involved in solving the murders? Finally, wouldn't you just know it, he's soon involved in solving the murders? Finally, wouldn't you just know it, he's soon involved in solving the murders? Finally, wouldn't you just know it, he's soon involved in solving the murders?
