ing someone as the Archie Bunker or Columbo character. The play is about people from different economic levels, and the way their lives are linked to each other in jumbled, broken bits. These are characters that come up and grab you, said Amann. They're memorable.

Besides hip costumes, the show also features some fun inusic from the early 1970s and late 1960s. Although they've never worked together before, Amann said the cast is having a lot fun with this show. They range in age from 30 to 45, and are getting along really well.

They're going outside the box with their characters, Amann said. She likes working with SRO Productions, short for "Standing Room Only" Productions because they continue to de shows that aren't popular or well known. She also likes the group's open easting policy.
