of Monticello

It was at Monticello that Jefferson prepared the draught of instructions for Virginia's delegation to the congress which met at Philadelphia. His activity in the cause of the colonies brought him into special disfavor with the British and it was planned to capture Jefferson at Monticello through Hessian raiders. Jefferson was warned that the enemy was coming to Monticello, and he sent his family away, and he himself escaped on

The former president, the purchaser of Louisiana, the chastiser of the Barbary pirates, the founder of the University of Virginia, as the scholar, the philosopher and the savant, he was known the world over.

Every day for at least eight months in the year he was the contingent of the great army of Macdonell. People of wealth, fashion, men of office, professional men, military and civil, lawyers, doctors, Protestant, clergy, Catholics, priests, members of congress, foreign ministers, missionaries, Indian agents, all were his friends. Some came from affection and respect, some from curiosity; some to give or receive advice or instruction, some from idleness, some because others set the example. And everybody who could not get away from the city to the great red land gave thought to the great ruined man of the nation.

Jefferson retained his health nearly to his last days, and had the happiness of living to the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. He died at Monticello, Va., on July 4, 1826. He was buried in his own graveyard at Monticello, beneath a stone upon which was engraved an inscription prepared by his own hand: "Here lies the body of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statute of Virginia, for Religious Liberty and Father of the University of Virginia."

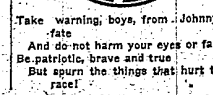

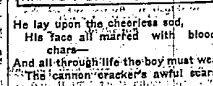

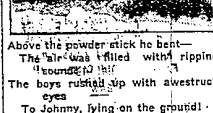

"The sage of Monticello" stands to-day as the father of his country in the esteem of the United States. And this is as it should be for his wise counsel helped to establish this nation as firmly as did his statesmanship of George Washington.

The LAST FIRECRACKER
by WILBUR D. NESBIT

'Tis the last red firecracker
 Left lying alone;
 All its former companions
 Are burst and gone.
 Not one of its kindred
 Now loved and is nigh
 To observe its last sputter
 Or hear its last sigh.
 It lies on the sidewalk,
 But none takes it up—
 Little Willie has wandered
 Downtown with the gun.
 To inquire of the doctor
 If dogs grow new tails
 For a bunch of firecrackers
 Filled puppy with walls.

Uncle Thomas is resting
Upstairs on a cot.
He must lie on his stomach
His back is so hot;
Poor old grandpa is moaning
In grizzled despair,
For a wayward skyrocket
Took his beard and his hair.
Papa has his head bandaged
In coverings neat,
And a surgeon is fixing
The burns on his feet;
Mamma thinks she'll recover
The use of her arms,
Though the red fire that burned them
Caused eight fire alarms.

'Tis the last red firecracker
Where it was flung down
Ere the mantle of silence
Fell over the town:
There's no one to explode it
It lies where it fell,
And must wait for ignition
Till some one gets well.

"Easy to Cut the Price."

A man went into a butcher's shop and asked how much sausages were a pound.

"[Ah]" said the butcher, "order brings you down ups." "I shall haf to spend you twenty-five cents."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the customer, "that is outrageous. I can get them at Schmidt's for twenty cents."

"Well, yu didn't you?"

"Oh, vell," replied the butcher, "I was out of 'em; I'd sell 'em for twenty cents, too."

"I deem it my duty to tell about a cure that the Cuticura Soap and Ointment brought me in, which was breaking out all right at the edge of my hair on the forehead, and spread over the front part of the top of my head from ear to ear, and over my ears which caused a most fearful burning itch, or eczema."
"For three years I had this terrible breaking out on my face, and my family doctor and I had tried every remedy, but failed to cure it. Then I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them for two months with the result of a complete cure. Cuticura, Soap and Ointment, also cured my itching scalp and I have advised a lot of people to use them." (Signed) C. D. Tharrington, Creek, N. C. Jan. 26, 1912

Healing Scalp—Hair Falling Out.—I have been suffering with itching on my scalp for the past few years. My hair fell out in spots all over my head. My scalp started to trouble me with sores, the itching was very bad. I tried many things, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was informed on the top. Then the hair fell out and left me three bald spots the shape of a half dollar. I went to more than one doctor, but could not get any relief. I was then informed to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I tried one bar of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment and felt relieved right away. Now the bald spots have disappeared, and my hair is growing again. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all that are suffering with scalp trouble. (Signed) E. Sumner, June 23, 1911, New York, N. Y.

The Shorter Route.

Lady Duff Gordon, at a luncheon at Sherry's in New York, had an anecdote appropos of the divorce elite.

"Two girls," she said, "were chatting over a cocktail and a cigarette.

"Marriages are made in heaven," said the first girl, and blew a big cloud of smoke into the air and regarded it with dreamy eyes.

"The second girl with a light laugh replied:

"Yes, that is true; but, thank goodness, to unmake them we have to go only as far as Reno."
