Play Horowitz's
Piano in the Detroit Area

Local music students get rare opportunity to play legendary instruments of the immortals

BLOOMFIELD HILLS - For music lovers, playing Vladimir Horowitz's legendary Steinway concert grand would generate the same thrill that a baseball fan would experience if allowed to hit a few fly balls with Babe Ruth's bat.

Steinway & Sons - the piano maker that most music experts consider the world's finest - is giving Detroit-area music lovers just such an opportunity to touch history as its Legendary Piano Tour comes to Hammell Music. Inc. Vladimir Horowitz's personal concert grand - crafted for the master in 1940 - was used on countless recordings and accompanied him to concert performances throughout the world, including his historic tour of Russia in 1989.

The tour also includes a Steinway concert grand owned and played extensively by world-renowned pianist Van Cliburn, on loan from his personal collection; incredible pianos that have been played in concert halls around the world, says Frank Marxuco, executive vice president of Steinway & Sons.

Tour dates are April 29 through May 2 at Hammell's Utica location, May 4 through May 8 at Hammell's Bloomfield Hills location, and May 10 through 12 at Hammell's Livonia location.

Private sessions to play the pianos can be reserved by calling the Hammell Music location nearest you.

On May 8, Hammell Music will host Evenings Around the Pianos presented by guest speaker Louis Nagel, a piano professor at the University of Michigan. Nagel will discuss the Legendary Tour pianos beginning at 7 p.m. at Hammell's Bloomfield Hills showroom. The event is free but seating may be limited. Call Hammell Music at 248-594-1414 for more information.

the Frank Tollaro-designed brilliant-blue 7-foot Rhapsody arc-case piano (valued at $145,000); and an exceptional arc-case piano designed by Wendell Castle and handcrafted to commemorate the 500,000 piano made by Steinway.

During this tour, area piano teachers, students and music lovers of all ages can see and play these
