Wood Creek student rules for a day

sbuck@oe.homecomm.net
Geena Girard, who won a raffle to be Wood Creek Principal of the Day, learned in a few hours what it takes to hold that position.
She was excited by her new responsibilities.
"I never win anything," said Geena, a third grader.
Enticed by a Hyer that read, "Hey, kids have you ever wondered what Dr. Ravitz does all day?
Here's your chance to find out," students purchased tickets for 50 cents each.
The first-ever raffle had two winners; the other was Nathan Wang, a first grader who enjoyed the role the week before.
Geena visited classrooms, shared in a Special Friends Luncheon, assisted with an evacuation drill and assisted with dismissal of Educare, an enrichment program.

She also gave her own class a special treat — an extra recess. They were nice to me and nice to the teachers," Geena said.

Geena assisted Ravitz with the evacuation drill, checking classes and bathrooms to make sure nobody was there.
When the drill was over, Geena called the 380 stu-

When the drill was over, Geena called the 380 students who walked 500 feet from the school back in, using a megaphone with a siren.

I asked her for a day off but she wouldn't give it, said coach Barry Nofzinger as he walked past.

Geena invited her friend, Cassie Sumara, to a Spe-seem myster ner freng, cassie Sumara, to a Special Frienda Luncheon with Ravitz and her special friend, Dreana Childrey.

The foursome went to Little Daddy's Restaurant in Southfield.
