Oakland Child Care Council offers professional development

Free professional development courses for child care providers are being offered by the Oakland County Child Care Council. Registration for the summer session has been extended until July 15 for new and returning students. Most classes take place July through September at various Oakland County locations.

Course work gives a child care provider valuable training and skills. Students can also earn college credit or a child development associate credential by taking classes.

"Our courses develop the professionalism of today's child care provider who not only maintains a safe and healthy environment, but also stimulates early learning that is critical in a child's development," said Susan Ray Allen, executive director of the Council. "Whether they run a small home business, take care of a family member's child or work in a large day care center, we have something to offer them."

A selection of courses includes: an introduction to child development, caring for infants and toddlers, working with children who have special needs, job duties and responsibilities of the child care administrator, developing learning tools and teaching resources, planning learning activities for children, and CPR and first aid.

The classes are free through the Michigan Child Care

Futures Project. A $6 registration fee per course applies.

For a class schedule and list of locations, call Lisa Betzler at (248) 681-5633.

The Oakland County Child Care Council promotes the training of child care providers through professional development programs year round. The Council also provides a free service to families who need referrals to licensed and registered child care homes and centers, and consults with businesses seeking child care options for employees.

A good deed

Truckin': A 1999 Dodge Ram truck was donated, by DaimlerChrysler, to the Lost Lake Scout Reservation, near Clare, Mich. This truck replaces an older (1986) truck at the camp. The truck was donated in Boy Scout Troop 110's name. The troop is sponsored by Our Lady of Sorrows church in Farmington. Thanks to Don Killing (dad of Scout Ryan Killing) for arranging for the truck donation and for driving it to the camp on June 24.
