

Hart Plaza hosts legendary and local jazz artists

Put on Pete Fountain's Swingin' Blues CD and see if you can keep from dancing. The legendary clarinetist's swings Dixieland like no one else can. That's because the 72-year-old Fountain was born and raised in New Orleans, the birthplace of the only true American art form—jazz. By age nine he'd already taken up clarinet after a doctor told his mother he had weak lungs and suggested they either move to the country or Pete take up a wind instrument. He chose clarinet and by 14 had formed a band to play New Orleans clubs on the weekends. At 17 he was earning a reputation for his musical skills in the strip clubs on Bourbon Street. His fame soon spread as a mainstay on the Lawrence Welk Show in the late 1950s.

FORD DETROIT INTERNATIONAL JAZZ FESTIVAL

When: 3 p.m. to midnight Friday, Aug. 30, noon to midnight Saturday-Sunday, Aug. 31-Sept. 1, and noon to 11 p.m. Monday, Sept. 2
Where: Hart Plaza on Jefferson Avenue along the Detroit River. For more information, call (313) 963-7622 or visit the Web site at www.detroitjazzfest.com

Families across America tuned in just to see Fountain play New Orleans jazz. Shortly after he opened a jazz club in the French Quarter where he still plays three nights a week.

On Monday, Sept. 2, Fountain will have the crowd on their feet in Hart Plaza for the final concert of the 23rd annual Ford Detroit International Jazz Festival which opens Friday, Aug. 30. Like a piper he'll lead them Up a Lazy River then rattle their bones with Muskrat Ramble. He's played Detroit a dozen times over the years.

"I always loved jazz and the Ed Sullivan and Johnny Carson shows. In fact, he was on Carson's Tonight Show a total of 59 times.

Fountain's never lost his quick wit. He jokes that age hasn't changed him much but he used to be 6-foot, 6-inches and now he's 6-foot, 6-inches.

"I enjoy the clarinet, and still enjoy playing the clarinet," said Fountain. "I played sax for a while even made a few recordings but never forgot about clarinet. Clarinet is a love-hate instrument. When you have a set of good reeds and the clarinet's singing it's love but when you don't, I tell everybody it's like blowing into a bag with a hole in it."

Fountain's performance is all part of Frank Malfitano's plan to present a "continuation of jazz" in his swaggy year as festival director. Fountain symbolizes the roots in New Orleans as does Branford Marsalis (10:15 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 31, on the Amphitheatre Stage). For a complete schedule visit the Web site www.detroitjazzfest.com or call (313) 963-7622.

"I want to show where jazz has come from—Fountain to Louie Armstrong—into where music is now and where it's heading," said Malfitano. "It's not a music that died in the 50s and 60s. This is a music that continues to grow and flourish. Jazz is alive and well. It's part of American musical heritage and culture."

"Detroit is truly one of the greatest music Meccas in the world. From a music standpoint for me the festival has to be Detroit-centric with an educational, clinic, meet the artists, student performances by 30 schools, 40 Detroit-based jazz groups, many who could break out of here and go national but they've chosen to do what they do here. Regina Carter and Straight Ahead have gone on to national acclaim. And there's always a bit of international flavoring in the stew with artists from Africa, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Canada."

In addition to student performers from West Bloomfield and Farmington-Harrison High School and Schoolcraft College on the Jam Academy Stage on Sunday, Sept. 1, and North Farmington High School on Labor Day, seasoned veteran Buddy Budson performs with his sextet 4:15 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30, on the Waterfront Stage. The Southfield pianist began playing professionally more than four decades ago and for many years was on the road with The Four Tops, Buddy Rich Big Band and Earl Klugh. He recorded with them as well as with the sextet which releases Afternoon in the City, an all original CD by band members and Denton Johnson in a couple of months. In early September Budson returns to the studio with eight new straight ahead jazz pieces in the mainstream instrumental tradition. Budson's written a lot of original music and arranged it for sextet. He likes working with trumpet, tenor saxophone and trombone.

"It's everything from the high energy Off With Their Heads to ballads like Ursula (for his wife and music partner) and Erika (his daughter)," said Budson. Ursula Walker and Buddy Budson have played the festival a number of times along with venues like the Bird of Paradise, Ann Arbor and Clarkson State. She's giving her voice a break this year but Budson's excited to be back on stage in Hart Plaza.

"It's going to be fun," said Budson. "It's a unique festival to this area with national and local performers. Detroit's always been one of the cities outside of New York that's a supplier to the jazz scene and like New York spawns a lot of jazz artists. It's the largest free jazz festival in North America."
