Although several tracks echo
his hit single Gangsta's Paradise — Show Me Love cries out for people to put Paradise — Show the Love cires out for people to put down their guns and love one another—it's hard to take them seriously when they're packaged with titles such as Cadillac Vogues, I Like Girls and Pop Yo Collar.

In Coolio's defense, there's no reason not to release an album like this. Others throughout the genre are embracing the same 'bling-bling' culture of extravagance— and their records are selling. But Coolio has always seemed socially conscious—he's done children's songs for network television— and like it or not, people have come to expect more.
