"Our art, music and physical education programs are outstanding."
She mentioned the difficulty of studying the benefits of a shared-time program while also hearing the burt voiced by some parents. Watson said 177 parents out of 550 families attended the grade-level meetings. Forty opposed shared time, he said. "About 30-33 people were able to discuss some legitimate questions in a thoughtful, appropriate manner, Watson questions in a thoughtful, appropriate manner, Walson said in a Nov. 14 school newsletter. "The behaviors exhibited at the meeting of Oct. 29 are wrong. It is time to move on. This issue has taken too much time, too much emergy and has detracted from other school issues that need to be addressed.

"Perhaps it is appropriate for those people who remain adminantly opposed to shared time to look for a different school that will better meet their needs."

Shared time plan succeeds in Livonia

Our Lady of Sorrows Monsignor Walter Hurley has said in the past that if the Farmington Public Schools district doesn't partner with OLS officials to provide shared time programs, he may approach the Livonia Public School district.
As of Dec. 11 that had not happened, according to Mary Combs, supervisor of shared time for the Livonia Public Schools. However, the concept of shared time has proven suecessful there.
The district initiated shared time at most major Livonia nonpublic schools at the same time seven years ago.
Agreements allow public school teachers to work in private

13 nonpublic schools in several school districts:
■ Livonia – St. Edith, St. Genevieve, St. Michael and Peace Lutheran
■ Westland/Wayne – St. Damlan, St. Mary of Wayne, St. Michael's of Wayne and St. Matthew Lutheran
■ Plymouth/Canton – Our Lady of Good Counsel and All Saints

Saints
Northville – St. Paul, Northville Christian and Our Lady of Victory.
"It's been wonderful," Combs said. "We have had great expesaid. We have had great experiences."

Only noncore classes such as art, music, physical education, computer and industrial technology are offered. All classes aren't offered at every school. For instance, Combs said, students at one school receive only band instruction. Shared time has not been a financial windful for the Livonia district. The public district pays for supplies like glue, halk, paint brushes and volley-bell and basketball nets.
The profit is not there that people think! Combs said.
About 2,800 students are in

About 2,800 students are in the Livonia-sponsored pro-grams, said Jay Young, who was the director of the shared time program until this year. The money paid to the school district goes back into program costs, Young said.

"We have over 100 (full-time equivalent students) in the shared time program, and Randy Liepa, Livonia's assistant superintendent of business. They are counted on a pro-rated basis, based upon the amount of time they are with us as a ratio to a full day of instruction.

Livonia's foundation allowance is $8,105 per student, Liepa said. The small portion that remains after all costs goes into the general fund to support all school efforts, he said, although information about that amount wasn't support all school entors, ne said, although information about that amount wan't immediately available. In introducing the shared time program, both Young and Combs made presentations to parents at nonpublic schools. "We started small with the major ones," Combs said. "We didn't do a lot of recruitment." After about three years, the Livonia school district branched out to other districts. A public school district can only provide shared time to contiguous districts. They have to be our neighbors, 'Young said.

Until this year, the Livonia district transported nonpublic school students to the former Dickinson School on teachers go to the various

New teachers were hired to work specifically in the shared

"It's win-win, Young said.
'It's allowed us to keep a build-ing open.
While OLS leadership and Farmington school officials may, also feel that way, a vocal group of parents have raised concern about such issues as the elimi-nation of the religious aspect of instruction from shared-time classrooms. Combs heard about the controvery at OLS from the controversy at OLS from parents who called. "It saddens me, I can't tell you how," she said.
