the back row is closer to the stage than in the old barn. There are no bad sight lines, not a bad seat in the house. Hadley said, "And backstage we have 15 feet of wing space. We had zero before for cast members to move on and off. We never had a second floor before, but with the new building we have fly space for raising drops, and 1-beauss designed to carry 36,000 pounds of load. The curtain will go up, not sideways. I think we can do some fine productions. The 50 per cent larger stage opens up the number and type of shows we can do. Romeo and hillet are not in our repertoire because we didn't have two stories for a balcony.

"It is so exciting to have an actual theater to do our per-formances in," said Nancy Coumoundouror, cultural arts coordinator for the cities of Farmington Hills and Farmington. "We wanted to sup-port the Players because of how hard they've worked in the com-nunity. It is win-win situation to have found a home for the youth theater program we began last summer. We plan to make it more extensive this year." In addition to renting the more extensive this year. In addition to renting the facility for functions, meetings and concerts (the Ambassador Quintet takes over the stage for children), businesses and individuals can help support the new theater. Naming opportunities are still available. Nissan Corp. already has its name on the ticket tollice.

"One roots went up along the ticket tollice, and the way. There are lining you don't know about, changes to code, always little surprises. The construction budget went up over $100,000. Hadley said. "We're thinking of other fund-raising ideas, but we're still delighted to accept donations. Naming the ticket office for the Nissan Corp. signifies a partnership. Every show has a budget. "We've done car washes and thought we might as well do what we do best," Tupper sald. All the members pitched in along the way, Marge Wetzel found out about the plans to tear down the George Burns Theater in Livenila and pursues owners to donate a number of teens, including the plans seat and large scale conclus from the tobby and ladies room. "It was a windfall before the holidays," Hadley said. "The theater closed in 32 and it was full. We saved at least $20,000 on the seats and they're more comfortable than what we could afford to purchase. Right now we're waiting on quotes that moves sets up overhead. I can say unequivocally that we're the most sophisticated community theater in the state, but we couldn't have done it without our members."

"We called on the talents of members," Tupper added. 'Our current president Dave Trenew was knowledgeable about huilding and construction. It understands the technical aspects. Marcia helped with the seats and retrieving various items from the George Burns. The gala's going to be a plannorous night. The play's set in Art Deep cried and we're using the lobby carpeting for the set."
