A Glimmer of Eternity

It is natural for us to fear death, we love life and hope to enjoy it as long as possible. Perhaps what we fear most about death is the uncertainty of it. In the face of death, we are like children, not knowing what the experience of dying will be like and wondering whether we will "live" on after our deaths. For a variety of reasons, many of us are confident that we will live on after our deaths. We may feel the presence of our loved ones who have gone before us. There are many who have had "near death" experiences or who have actually died and were revived, who tell us that they felt as if they were being transported toward a warm and radiant light. Sometimes we are powerfully struck by the feeling that this physical life can't possibly be all there is; we feel surrounded by God, bathed in an ocean of spirit. We have the idea of eternity within us and we sense eternity in the stars. What a cruel cosmic joke it would be if eternity were nothing but a figment of our imagination. However, these experiences, along with the fact that religions around the world almost universally assure us of a future life, give us faith that death is not the end of life, but a new beginning. Fear not, although we may not know what lies in store for us after we die, our faith gives us hope that this life is but a glimmer of a wondrous eternity.

For is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen
