The modern world has seen such an explosion of information that no one could possibly keep up with it all. There are literally hundreds of new books and articles being published every day, in addition to the extensive information available on the Internet. While this fact may make us feel insignificant and even overwhelmed, the positive side is that much of this new information is helpful to the human race and to us in particular. New advances in science and technology can make our lives better, and the growth of knowledge confirms that "no man is an island." That is, we are all interconnected and dependent on the contributions of our fellow human beings to get along in life. God wants us to be happy, and one of the ways in which our happiness is furthered, is by the many and varied contributions of scientists, poets and others who add to our collective knowledge. Take advantage of the wealth of information out there, but also do your best to contribute in whatever way you can.
