Comedy, thriller have style, just different sorts

Down With Love embraces the bright, cheery style of Hollywood's '50s and '60s grand romantic comedies, paying tribute to and making fun of the genre with over-the-top period costumes and sets. It also stars the always effervescent Renee Zellweger.

Down With Love opens Friday. In the movie, Zellweger plays Barbara Novak, a feminist writer who becomes involved with playboy journalist Catcher Block (Ewan McGregor). Block is the ultimate catch, but has met his match in Novak.

Down With Love, a Twentieth Century Fox production, is rated PG-13.

On the other end of the spectrum is Matrix Reloaded, the highly anticipated sequel to The Matrix.

The action thriller, which opens today, has an all-together different style defined by special effects, acrobatics and signature all-black costumes complete with dark sunglasses.

The cast is also, by the way, trying to save the human race from extinction.

The film stars Keanu Reeves, Laurence Fishburne, Carrie-Anne Moss, Hugo Weaving, Matt Damon and Jada Pinkett Smith.

A trailer for THE MATRIX REVOLUTIONS, the next sequel, follows the second chapter of the Matrix trilogy, so stay after the credits for a sneak peek.

Matrix Reloaded, a Warner Bros. release, is Rated R.
